

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. The Ohio State Bar Association

CONSTITUTION

Adopted July 8, 1880 (Vol. 1, Page 9).

I. NAME

This Association shall be known as "The Ohio State Bar Association."

II. OBJECT

The Association is formed to advance the science of jurisprudence, to promote reform in the law, to facilitate the administration of justice, to uphold integrity, honor and courtesy in the legal profession, to encourage thorough liberal legal education and to cultivate cordial intercourse among the members of the Bar.

III. MEMBERSHIP

The members of the Bar attending this Convention as delegates this eighth day of July, 1880, are hereby declared to be members of this Association, provided they shall, during the present session, pay the admission fee and sign this Constitution. Any member of the Bar in good standing, residing or practising in the State of Ohio, may become a member of the Association upon nomination and vote, as hereinafter provided.

IV. ELECTION OF MEMBERS.

All nominations for membership shall be made by the Committee on Admissions, and must be transmitted in writing to the President and by him reported to the Association, and if any member demands a vote upon any name thus reported, the Association shall thereupon vote thereon by ballot. Several nominees may be voted upon on the same ballot, and in such a case the placing of the word "no" against any name or names upon the ticket shall be deemed a negative vote against such name or names and against those only. One negative vote in every five shall suffice to defeat an election. (Amended July 12, 1901. Vol. 22, pp. 72, 91.)

V. OFFICERS

The officers of the Association shall be a President, who shall deliver the annual address and be ineligible for a second term; one Vice-President from each judicial district reported by membership in the Association; a Secretary and a Treasurer. All of these shall be elected at the annual meeting and hold their offices till the next annual meeting of the Association and until their successors are elected.

VI. COMMITTEES

The members of this Association, from each of the Common Pleas Judicial Districts of Ohio, existing prior to 1914, shall choose from their respective districts one member of each of the following committees:

Executive	Membership	Legal Education
Grievances	Legal Biography	Legislation
Judicial Administration and Legal Reform

A majority of the members of a committee shall constitute a quorum; and, excepting the Executive Committee, each committee shall choose a Chairman and Secretary: and at each annual meeting of said Association, every committee shall report in writing a summary of its proceedings since the last annual report, together with any suggestions the Committee may deem suitable and pertaining to its powers, duties or business; which reports, together with the proceedings of the annual meetings, shall be prepared and printed by the Secretary of said Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee, and together with the Constitution, By-Laws, names and residences of officers, standing committees and members of the Association, as soon as practicable after each annual meeting. (Amended July 11, 1917. Vol. 38, p. 42.)

VII.

The President of said Association by and with the approval of the Executive Committee may remove any member of any standing committee from office for failure to attend to his duties, and may appoint members of said Association residing in said respective districts to fill any vacancies caused by removal from office or resignation or death of such member, or failure of the members of said Association from any district to select a member of any such committee or committees. (Amended July 11, 1917. Vol. 38, p. 43.)

VIII. FINAL ACTION

No action of the Association of a permanent nature or recommending changes in law or the administration of justice, shall be final until approved by the Standing Committee, to which the same shall be referred by the Association.

IX. PRESIDENT

The President, or, in his absence, the Senior Vice-President, shall preside at all meetings of the Association, and the President shall deliver an address at the opening of the meeting next after his election.

X. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The President shall be ex-officio Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Secretary shall be ex-officio Secretary of the Executive Committee. This committee shall manage the affairs of the Association, subject to the provisions of the Constitution and By-Laws, and shall be vested with the title of all its property as trustees thereof, and shall make By-Laws for the Association, subject to amendment by the Association. (Amended July 6, 1916. Vol. 37, p. 25.)

XI. COMMITTEE ON MEMBERSHIP

The proceedings of this committee shall be deemed confidential and shall be kept secret, except so far as written or printed reports of the committee shall be necessarily and officially made to the Association.

XII. COMMITTEE ON JUDICIAL ADMINISTRATION AND LEGAL REFORM

It shall be the duty of the Committee on Judicial Administration and Legal Reform to take record of all proposed changes of the law and to recommend such as may be, in their opinion, entitled to the favorable influence of the Association; and further, to observe the working of the judicial system of the state; to collect information with reference thereto, and to recommend such action as they may deem advisable.

XIII. COMMITTEE ON LEGAL EDUCATION

It shall be the duty of the Committee on Legal Education to examine and report what change it is expected to propose in the system of legal education and of admission to the practice of the profession in the State of Ohio.

XIV. COMMITTEE ON GRIEVANCES

The Committee on Grievances shall receive all complaints which may be made in matters affecting the interests of the legal profession, the practice of law and the administration of justice and report the same to the Association with such recommendations as they may deem advisable.

The proceedings of this committee shall be deemed confidential and kept secret, except so far as reports of the same shall be necessarily and officially made to the Association.

XV. COMMITTEE ON LEGAL BIOGRAPHY

The Committee on Legal Biography shall provide for the preservation among the archives of the Association of suitable written or printed memorials of the lives and characters of deceased members of the Ohio Bar and procure and report to the next annual meeting a short biographical sketch of each member whose death shall have been reported at any annual meeting. (Amended December 28, 1886. Vol. 7, p. 65.)

XVI. COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATION

It shall be the duty of the Committee on Legislation to present to the General Assembly all recommendations of the Association respecting changes in existing laws and proposed new legislation, and endeavor to secure appropriate action thereon, reporting its proceedings to the Association at each annual meeting.

XVII. SECRETARY

The Secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings and conduct the correspondence of the Association and perform the usual duties of such office.

XVIII. TREASURER

The Treasurer shall collect, and by order of the Executive Committee disburse, all funds of the Association, and keep regular accounts, which, at all times, shall be open to the inspection of any member or members of the Executive Committee.

XIX. ANNUAL MEETING

This Association shall meet annually at such time and place as the Executive Committee may select, and those present at such meeting shall constitute a quorum. The President, by and with the approval of the Executive Committee, may call special meetings at such time and place as may be deemed expedient. (Amended July 6, 1916. Vol. 37, p. 24.)

XX. DUES

The admission fee will, in all cases, be $5, which shall include the dues of the applicant to December 31st of the year in which he is admitted. The annual dues of the members shall be $5, to be paid yearly on or before the first day of the annual meeting of the Association, and after each annual meeting the Treasurer shall notify each member in arrears for dues of the amount due; and any member who shall remain in default for dues until the close of the annual meeting next following such default, shall be suspended and dropped from the rolls and shall not be reinstated until all back dues are paid; provided, however, that in case such back dues amount to more than $5, such members may, upon recommendation of the Committee on Membership, be reinstated on payment of the sum of $5. (Amended December 28, 1886, Vol. 7, p. 65; July 15, 1892, Vol. 13, p. 91, and July 8, 1902, Vol. 23, p. 26; August 27, 1918, Vol. 39, p. 69.)

XXI. AMENDMENTS

This Constitution may be altered or amended by a vote of a majority of the members present at any annual meeting. (Amended July 6, 1916. Vol. 37, p. 24.)

BY-LAWS

The following By-Laws, prepared by the Sub-Committee appointed for that purpose, were adopted in the month of September, 1881, by the following indorsement written thereon:

APPROVED

The undersigned members of the Executive Committee hereby consent that a meeting of the Committee to consider the within By-Laws be dispensed with, and that said By-Laws be considered as adopted and be published by the Secretary with his report.

RUFUS KING,
JOHN W. HERRON,
J. T. HOLMES,
L. J. CRITCHFIELD,
GEO. W. HOUCK,
JOHN F. BROTHERTON,
WARREN P. NOBLE,
GEO. W. GEDDES,
CHAS. H. GROSVENOR,
D. A. HOLLINGSWORTH,
WM. UPSON.

I. The President shall submit to the Executive Committee for its action at a meeting, a sufficient time before each annual or special meeting, a program for the next meeting, which shall provide for addresses by distinguished members of the Bar upon subjects of interest to the Bar, discussions of matters of legal importance, and also on biography of deceased members of the Association. (Amended July 6, 1916. Vol. 37, p. 25.)

II. The Order of Exercises at the annual meeting shall be as follows:

- (a) Annual Address of the President.
- (b) Report of Committee on Admission and Election of Members.
- (c) Report of Secretary.
- (d) Report of Treasurer.
- (e) Reports of Standing Committees:
 - Executive Committee.
 - On Judicial Administration and Legal Reform.
 - On Legal Education.
 - On Grievances.
 - On Legal Biography.
 - On Legislation.
- (f) President's call upon each Judicial District for names of deceased members.
- (g) Reports of Special Committees.
- (h) The Nomination of Officers.
- (i) The Appointment of Standing Committees.
- (j) Miscellaneous Business.
- (k) The Election of Officers.

The address to be delivered by a person invited by the Executive Committee shall be at the morning session of the second day of the annual meeting, and the reading of papers by the members appointed by the Executive Committee shall be on the same day, unless the Executive Committee shall designate some other time for the address and reading of papers. After the reading of each paper an opportunity shall be given for discussion on the topic of the paper.

The Executive Committee shall publish some days in advance of each annual meeting, a statement of the person who is to deliver the address and the persons who are to read papers and the subject of each. (Amended December 28, 1886. Vol. 7, p. 65.)

III. No person taking part in a discussion shall speak more than ten minutes at a time or more than twice on one subject. A stenographer shall be employed at each annual meeting.

IV. At any of the meetings of the Association, members of the Bar of any foreign country or of any state other than Ohio, who are not members of the Association, may be admitted to the privilege of the floor during such meetings.

V. All papers read before the Association shall be lodged with the Secretary. The annual address of the President, the reports of the Committees, and all proceedings at the annual meeting shall be printed, but no other address made or paper read or presented shall be printed, except by order of the Executive Committee. Extra copies of reports, addresses and papers read before the Association, may be printed for the use of their authors, not exceeding one hundred copies to each of such authors.

The Executive Committee, as a Committee on Publications, shall meet within one month after each annual meeting at such time and place as the Chairman shall appoint.

VI. The terms of office of all officers elected at any annual meeting shall commence at the adjournment of such meetings; but the terms of office of the members of the several committees appointed by the President shall commence immediately on their appointment.

VII. Each committee shall elect its own officers, whose terms of office shall commence on their election and continue until the appointment of a new committee; and each Standing Committee shall continue until its successor shall be appointed.

VIII. All Standing Committees shall meet on the day preceding each annual meeting at the place where the same is to be held, at such hour as the respective chairmen shall designate.

IX. Special meetings of any committee shall be held at such times and places as the chairman thereof may appoint. Reasonable notice shall be given by him to each member by mail.

X. The Treasurer's report shall be examined and audited annually, before its presentation to the Association, by two members to be appointed by the Chairman of the Executive Committee.

MEMORANDA

All Judges and ex-Judges of the Supreme Court of Ohio are ex-officio members of this Association. I Rep., 17.

All Judges and ex-Judges of the United States Court who are members of the Ohio Bar are ex-officio members of this Association. VI. Rep., 157.

At each annual meeting of the Association a committee, consisting of three members, to be styled the Committee on Railroads and Transportation, shall be appointed by the President of the Association, whose duty it shall be, at least six weeks prior to the next ensuing annual meeting, to negotiate and complete all practicable arrangements for reduced rates of travel to those attending, and through its Chairman, at least four weeks before the annual meeting, advise the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Secretary of the Association of the arrangements made, so that the same may be printed in the notices and programs sent out to members in advance of the meeting. (Adopted from Secretary's report, July 18, 1889, X Rep. 23.)

Resolved, That all applications for membership shall be accompanied with the membership fee, and upon default so to do, such application shall be returned without delay to such applicant by the Secretary of the Association or Committee on Membership. (Adopted by the Association, July 18, 1890, XI Rep., 124.)

AS TO DISTRIBUTION OF ANNUAL REPORTS

To the members of the Association the price per volume of the reports of the proceedings held prior to the date of their admission shall be twenty-five cents, except the first four reports bound in one book, which shall be $1.25 for the book.

To all other persons, excepting to law libraries and the exchange list of the Association, the price per volume shall be fifty cents, and for the four reports, bound in one book, the price shall be $2.00.

The payment of the annual dues entitles each member so paying to the volumes issued after the date of his membership. (Adopted July 8, 1903. Vol. 24, p. 15.)

S. J. Keating

Acting President

Report of Proceedings of the
THIRTY-NINTH ANNUAL MEETING of
THE OHIO STATE BAR ASSOCIATION held at Cleveland, Ohio, beginning Monday, August 26, 1918.

FIRST SESSION

Monday afternoon

Three o'clock

August 26, 1918

The First Session of the Thirty-Ninth Annual Meeting of The Ohio State Bar Association was called to order at three o'clock P. M. by Acting-President Thomas J. Keating, in the Assembly Room of the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland.

The Acting-President introduced Honorable P. L. A. Leighley, President of The Cleveland Bar Association, who delivered the address of welcome to the members of the Association.

Acting-President Thomas J. Keating then delivered the annual address as follows:

FEDERAL LEGISLATION IN BEHALF OF THOSE IN THE MILITARY SERVICE: THE IMPORTANCE OF
ITS WIDE PROPAGANDA AT THIS TIME.
THE DUTY OF THE BAR

Being drafted by the Executive Committee of this Association to address its annual meeting now convened, and in a measure to supply the place of the distinguished jurist we so unanimously and enthusiastically selected last year as our President, and whose valuable services we lost, when he bravely and uncomplainingly responded to the last call, I take occasion to acknowledge the honor conferred, but I fully realize the inadequacy of my powers to fill his place on this important occasion. Had he been permitted to serve out his full term of office, he would doubtless have entertained and instructed us at this time on some interesting topic close to his heart. Perhaps some such subject as the present primary method of selecting candidates for public office, or the wisdom of requiring that certain at least of the primary choices should be endorsed by the party convention, might have engaged his attention, especially as that subject was to have had the right of way at the mid-winter session, which was abandoned that the profession might give its time and service to the military questionnaire.

For my part I shall dispose of that subject with an approved quotation from a recent editorial in the New York Sun on a like political situation in that state, headed: "Cowardice Rules in Albany." The editorial ran as follows:

"The restoration of state nominating conventions has been delayed for a year at least by the potent influence of political cowardice and inertia within the walls of the state capitol. Direct nominations remain with us because the lawmakers are too lazy or too timid to sweep the costly, unrepresentative system away, and re-establish the method that developed naturally and logically from the free play of our institutions.

"An overwhelming majority of informed and intelligent citizens desire the abolition of a cumbersome, unsatisfactory practice, which has brought us none of the benefits its advocates promised, and has encouraged evils that should be eradicated.

"At a moment in which the best minds in public life should counsel together, and the declarations and candidates of parties should enlist the most earnest study of their most trusted leaders, the Republicans and Democrats alike are left in the Empire State at the mercy of temporary ebullitions of emotion and the corrective influence of an unofficial convention without authority, power or prestige.

"The adoption of the direct primary was a colossal blunder; its retention is a national menace."

But one subject now absorbs the thought and attention of the world as well as consumes its energies and substance—that topic is how to stop the brutality of one race and crush it so that that brutality shall become and forever remain completely non-existent.

One of the instrumentalities for the achievement of this purpose is our new, grand army of the republic, which is rapidly taking its place with the hosts from other lands, that what we term modern civilization shall not perish from the earth.

Much legislation has been enacted in Washington in the present crisis having special reference to the maintenance and welfare of this army which must sustain its arms on the field of battle; its honor on and under the seven seas and its safety in the very air we breathe.

I shall ask your attention briefly to some of this legislation in behalf of those in the military service, and to the importance of its wide propaganda at this time, and to the duty of the bar in the premises. The Council of National Defense deemed this legislation, to which attention will be directed, of sufficient importance to prepare a careful summary of it and direct the various sub-committees of the State Council of National Defense to prepare booklets incorporating this summary, supplemented by a summary of the laws of the different states on the subject most directly and immediately affecting those about to enter the military service. This booklet has been prepared for Ohio with a view to being useful to the profession and to those for whose benefit it was primarily intended.

No reference will be made by me at this time to that part of the booklet containing summaries of the state law, but attention will be focused upon the acts of Congress as contained in this booklet. In view of the importance of knowledge on the part of the bar generally of this Federal legislation and of the importance of this knowledge reaching those going into the service, I have decided at the very last moment, so to speak, to direct what I have to say on this occasion to these particular laws, and the duty of lawyers concerning the same.

A general call for aid from the legal profession was issued early by the government, and this resulted in the prompt organization of committees of lawyers throughout the nation to aid registrants in answering the military questionnaire. So important and exacting was this work that this Association deemed it wise and prudent to abandon the mid-winter session in order that the time and attention of the lawyers of Ohio might be devoted to it without interruption. These committees constitute the Legal Advisory Boards of the state. As a member of the special sub-committee of the Ohio Branch of the Council of National Defense, I have had occasion to know something of the work of these boards. Judging from some of the questions put to our committee it is apparent that the Bar generally may profit by a fuller knowledge of the Federal legislation affecting the military service.

These local boards are expected to hold in the hollow of their hands, as it were, the interests of those who go forth, and sacredly preserve and guard those interests. It is expected that the lawyers constituting these boards will treat those eligible for military service, (a term which by definition in law includes naval as well as army service) as clients entitled to their best service; the difference being that the lawyers need not feel restrained by the fine ethics of the profession from seeking such clients for the very purpose of rendering professional service, and the further material difference that such service shall be "without money and without price." While all of the legislation of Congress due solely to the war in which the world is engaged may affect the military service directly or indirectly, a comparatively small volume of it only, or few subjects of it, will be here summarized, a knowledge of which is essential in order to advise the soldier about those things that concern him immediately as he enters the service.

CIVIL RELIEF.

The first of these laws important to notice is that relating to his civil rights, known as the "Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act," approved March 8, 1918.

The importance of this act constitutes the subject of its first section, and no better statement of its purpose could be made than is there found, that to enable the United States to successfully prosecute and carry on the war in which it is at present engaged, protection is extended to persons in military service in order to prevent prejudice or injury to their civil rights, while in the service and so that they may devote their entire energy to the military needs of the Nation; and therefore provisions are made to suspend legal proceedings and transactions which may prejudice the civil rights of persons in such service during the war.

The enforcement of the rights protected by this act is not limited to any particular courts. All the courts of the entire country are within its provisions. It expressly recites that "the term 'court' as used in this Act shall include any court of competent jurisdiction of the United States or of any State, whether or not a court of record."

On April 6, 1917, a declaration of war was made, and Congress then and there pledged all the resources of this country to bring the conflict to a successful issue; and this law was passed so that the soldiers and sailors might devote their entire energy to accomplish the purpose of this sacred pledge. This pledge of Congress and this act to secure the devotion of the entire energy of those in active service sounded the doom of that imperialistic dynasty that started out in brazen fashion to extinguish free government even in this distant land.

This law supersedes all other laws inconsistent with its provisions, for it expressly recites that its provisions shall apply to all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and to proceedings commenced in any court therein.

Default judgments shall not be entered against a defendant in any action in any court unless the plaintiff shall first file therein an affidavit containing a statement of facts showing that the defendant is not in military service. If he cannot file such an affidavit, he must file in lieu thereof an affidavit that the defendant is in the military service, or that the plaintiff is unable to determine whether or not the defendant is in such service. In case no affidavit is filed, judgment cannot be entered without securing an order of court. If in case such an order is sought, it appears that the defendant is in military service, the court must appoint an attorney to represent him before judgment can be entered. If it does not appear whether the defendant is in military service or not, the plaintiff may be required to file a bond to indemnify the defendant from resultant loss. In case he is in military service, the court has discretion to require other conditions suitable to the requirements of the particular case.

If such judgment be entered during the period of such service or within thirty days after the termination thereof, and it appears that the one in the service was by reason thereof prejudiced in making a defense, the judgment may be opened not later than ninety days after the termination of the military service, on its being made to appear that there is a meritorious defense to the action or some part of it.

STAYS.

In an action or proceeding against a person in military service during the period of service or within sixty days thereafter, the court may, in its discretion, or on application shall, "unless in the opinion of the court the ability of the defendant to comply with the judgment or order entered or sought is not materially affected by reason of his military service,"

- (a) Stay action or proceedings at any stage;
- (b) Stay execution on the judgment;
- (c) Vacate or stay any judgment, attachment or garnishment.

Such stay shall be for the period of service and three months thereafter. The court may provide for payment of the judgment by installments or subject to such terms as may be just.

Such stay shall not give rise to a fine or penalty under any contract.

DISTRESS OR EVICTION.

In case of premises, the rent of which does not exceed $50.00 per month, occupied chiefly for dwelling purposes by the wife, children or other dependents of a person in military service, leave of court is necessary for eviction or distress. Such proceedings for eviction or distress may be stayed for not longer than three months, unless the tenant's ability to pay his rent was not materially affected by his military service.

CONTRACTS.

In case of an installment contract for purchase of real estate or personal property or a lease or bailment with the view to purchase, where an installment of the purchase price has been paid, the person selling, leasing, etc., may not terminate the contract or resume possession of property except by action in court. In such action, the court may order repayment of prior installments for retaking possession, or stay of proceedings, or make other provisions unless the defendant's ability to comply with the contract was not materially affected by his military service.

In case of a mortgage on real estate or personal property, in any proceeding to enforce such obligation against a person in military service, the court may and on application shall, unless the defendant is not prejudiced by reason of his military service, stay the proceedings or make other equitable disposition of the case.

In case of life insurance, not exceeding face value of $5,000.00, held by a man in the service where contract was made and the premium paid before September 1, 1917, no lapse for non-payment of a premium during the period of such service or one year after its expiration shall be allowed. But the insured person must, within one year after the termination of the period of his service, pay to the insurer all the premiums with interest. The Bureau of War Risk Insurance is charged with the duty of looking after these lapsed policies and protecting the insurance companies.

TAXES.

In case taxes fall due during military service on real property owned and occupied continuously during the service for dwelling or business purposes by a person in military service or his dependents and are unpaid, he may file an affidavit that his ability to pay is materially affected by such service. Leave of court must then be obtained before sale of the property to collect the taxes and the owner has a right to redeem at any time not later than six months after the termination of his period of service. This shall not be taken to shorten any period provided by the laws of Ohio for such redemption.

No rights to the public lands of the United States, acquired prior to entering the military service shall be forfeited or prejudiced thereby.

SURETIES RIGHTS.

The court has discretion to grant to any surety, guarantor, or indorser, a stay of the performance or enforcement of any obligation or liability which might be stayed or vacated under the provisions of the Act.

WAR RISK INSURANCE, ALLOTMENTS AND FAMILY ALLOWANCES.

Another point of large interest to those in the service is the Act of Congress establishing the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, approved October 6, 1917.

This law includes topics other than insurance. It provides for allotments of soldiers' pay, family allowances, and compensation for death or total disability. In seeking detailed information on this important law, as amended from time to time, inquiries should be addressed to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C.

According to the latest figures of the "Insurance Press," Americans are now carrying sixty billion dollars worth of life insurance and the interesting part of those figures for this occasion is that the government carries twenty-two billions for its soldiers and sailors. It is highly important that our defenders should know the provisions made for their benefit in this behalf and have this knowledge as a comforting and cheering source of encouragement. This kind of encouragement is more substantial than the decoration of the streets and highways and the beating of drums and blowing of horns as they march out, emotional and even inspiring as that may be. In comparison, however, it is but sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

The pension system is obsolete. It belongs to a past age and is not suited to later conditions.

Every commissioned officer and enlisted man and every member of the Army Nurse Corps (female) and of the Navy Nurse Corps (female) has a right upon application to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance within 120 days from the date of entering the active service, to obtain without medical examination insurance against death or total permanent disability, in any multiple of $500.00 not less than $1,000.00, nor more than $10,000.00."

The insurance is based upon the American Experience Table of Mortality, which is calculated upon a peace basis, and free from cost of commissions, et cetera, so that it is issued at a very low premium rate. This provision is made in order to give greater protection than is otherwise supplied to those who wish to take advantage of it. The insurance may be converted without medical examination into the various forms of life insurance, such as ordinary life, endowment and so on, at any time within five years after the termination of the war.

Furthermore, the soldier should know that the law requires all married men to make an allotment from his pay for the benefit of his family, and that this allotment is supplemented by a substantial family allowance paid by the government in addition to the allotment made by himself. The details of this law are too numerous for repetition here, but they have been set out quite fully in the committee's booklet.

The subject of Government insurance opens a vast field in which the United States is a pioneer. It is the first nation to insure its Army and Navy. General Pershing is quoted as having cabled that "Insurance heartens our men and strengthens the bonds that unite the Army and the people." No private life insurance corporation could do what the Government is doing in this behalf. The insurance is obtainable on a peace basis, except that it is sheared of much of the expense of the peace basis insurance. The extra hazard incident to military and naval life, which may be conservatively estimated at from 8 to 10 times the peace rates, is borne by the United States Government.

A commendable feature is that the policy is not assignable and payments thereunder to the insurer or beneficiary are not subject to claims of creditors. There is no more sacred trust than life insurance. Its beneficiaries are usually the most helpless, hence the importance of financial responsibility, and the Government transcends all other agencies in this particular.

So attractive has this form of insurance become, though only in its infancy, that it threatens to invade other wide fields of insurance. In advocating some amendments to the War Risk Insurance Act, a prominent United States Senator gave notice of his purpose to introduce legislation extending this class of insurance. He said:

"I desire to say that I feel this bill as now presented ought to comprehend all the employees of the Government, particularly those in shipyards and those in munition plants, and that it should cover the employees of the Government to the same extent and with the same privileges that now apply to soldiers. I shall not press this amendment, but I will give notice that I shall tender a bill to extend this soldiers' and sailors' risk insurance to all the employees of the government. I also give notice that I shall follow that bill up with a bill to extend the system to all wage earners of the United States of America and shall present it later on the floor in full."

The question remains what can or should the legal profession do to be of real service to the great cause in hand so as to aid the soldier to devote his "entire energy to the military needs of the Nation," even to giving that last full measure of devotion if necessary?

It will be observed that the civil relief act deals directly with the soldiers' civil rights. These rights are such as are established or secured in the courts. Here is where lawyers minister. This act constitutes the courts and their officers trustees of an express trust. In their hands rests the obligation to protect the country's defenders from attacks behind their backs.

In all the provisions made for the soldiers' direct benefit the lawyer's services are in immediate demand. Especially is this true in giving effect to the law for the protection of his civil rights, for the law itself invokes the aid of the profession to the end that it shall be a thing of substance and not of mere form.

In all the various activities relating to the war, whether operated through public or private charities, the great Red Cross Society, or Patriotic organizations of whatever kind, the services of the lawyer are among the first noticed.

In the President's Foreword to the Selective Service Regulations, when calling for the aid of men in particular lines or professions, his first call is on our profession:

"I urge men of the legal profession to offer themselves as associate members of the Legal Advisory Boards to be provided in each community for the purpose of advising registrants of their rights and obligations."

The appeal then proceeds to the medical profession, the newspaper fraternity, and finally to all citizens generally.

The provost marshal, General Crowder, in his communication to the Governors of the several states on the new plan for selecting men for military service, said:

"I consider the prompt and efficient organization of these Legal Advisory Boards as one of the most vital necessities of the new system."

In all the machinery devised and adopted to put the clumsy, but we hope, invincible power of this great nation into complete and perfect action, the aid of the legal profession has been freely invoked and as freely given, from the great American Bar Association to the smallest organization or group in the country.

To intelligently aid the soldier, the federal legislation to which attention is directed by this booklet requires more than passing notice. The war risk insurance act, including as it does, life insurance, the cheapest and best the world has ever known, family allotments, family allowances, compensation in case of death or disability in lieu of pensions, provision for rehabilitation, re-education and vocational training in case of injuries causing permanent disability, may not be fully grasped at once. The Hon. Julian Mack, the highest authority on this law, gave an exposition of it at a conference of officers and men of the Army and Navy. His explanation has the approval of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, and of Secretary McAdoo. In the course of this exposition he facetiously remarked to his audience that "You can't grasp it at a first reading, and probably won't grasp all of the details at a tenth reading—none of us have been able to do that."

While these guardians of our liberty go forth, we must be the guardians of their rights at home. They defend us there, we should defend them here. The civil relief act was passed for their benefit. We must see to its observance. Large discretion is vested in the courts. The bar may have large opportunity to see that that discretion is rightly exercised.

But above all there should be inculcated and propagated a spirit of generosity to the point of sacrifice, so that the soldier who stands ready to make the supreme sacrifice may know that the profession will keep step with him for the protection of his rights. The blight of the war on business may be felt. Doubtless in some quarters and in some lines law business will shrink. But according to statistics derived from the income reports lawyers may survive this danger quite as well, if not better, than people engaged in other occupations.

According to figures recently published and rather widely circulated giving the percentage of the income tax returns for 1916 of those engaged in gainful occupations, we stand second and are only exceeded by the brokers of the land. It seems that twenty per cent of the brokers were able to and did make income returns to the Government, and next on the list came the lawyers, of whom nineteen per cent made returns. From this high point the descent is rapid, the medical profession stopping at seven per cent, and the poor but honest farmer closing the list with twenty-four hundredths of one per cent, or less than a quarter of one per cent of his number is credited with making a return.

This is a fine showing of the prosperity of the lawyers, or else it is a high testimonial to the sterling integrity of the much abused members of this noble profession.

In extending a helping hand to those in the service whether in or out of court, all thought of fees should be abandoned; at least speaking for myself, that is the position I have taken. A few cases of greed have arisen in the state, in matters where it was the wish of the Government openly expressed that the services should be gratuitous. This is a grave mistake, and the lawyers who descend to it may as well know that, to use a phrase more forcible than elegant, whenever it becomes known, they get themselves in bad with the Government. We may have to make financial sacrifice. But what of the financial sacrifices alone of the thousands and millions who must go forth to battle; to say nothing of their other sacrifices!

While we can aid our defenders in explaining these laws to which reference is made in the Booklet, and in defending or representing them in court, and this is much, it is by no means all we can do.

It has been the pride of the profession in the past that it has had much to do in forming what is termed public sentiment. One of its traditions is its great power to direct public feeling and public sentiment. Its members have occupied the highest positions and "helped formulate the fundamental principles which today govern us as a free people and on which the ark of our freedom rests."

It may happen that in certain instances where relief or protection is necessary the civil relief act may not apply. Indeed such cases have come to the notice of our committee, and by our committee I mean the sub-committee of the State Branch of the Council of National Defense which has issued the booklet. Congress could not see and provide for every contingency.

Wherever such cases arise, and it appears that the statute does not afford the necessary protection, opportunity presents itself for pressure by moral suasion. The ancients, that eternal source of precepts and proverbs, had a saying attributed to Seneca:

"Shame may restrain what the law does not prohibit."

Again, is not our profession better adapted and better equipped than others to crush out the accursed insidious enemy propaganda, or propagandism, to obstruct the successful prosecution of the war? By this method largely the arch enemy dissipated the great power of Russia and almost engulfed Italy.

In this connection I am reminded to say that I have been especially enjoined by the chairman of the special committee for War Service of the American Bar Association to bring to the attention of the Bar at this meeting the importance of vigorous action on our part in response to the appeal of the alien property custodian. It is the duty of every citizen to report all property of persons included in any of the classes described in the circular of information revised to July 1, 1918. In the list are those disseminating propaganda calculated to injure the cause of the United States or to aid the cause of an enemy.

THE RED CROSS.

Our booklet, designed to acquaint those entering the military service with all provisions and activities operated for their benefit, contains a neat statement prepared by Prof. J. E. Hagerty, of the Ohio State University, of the services which that noble organization, the Red Cross, stands to perform.

This organization while not an arm of the government, is incorporated by Congress and supervised by the government. Its president is Woodrow Wilson, not by virtue of office, not because he is President of the United States, but as a citizen, duly chosen under its regulations.

This society has an adult membership of over twenty-two millions, and its mission is mercy. It is defined as "the world's international ideal of mercy, knowing no bounds of racial, religious or political separation, and wherever and whenever war, pestilence, storm, flood or disaster has wrought suffering, want or distress, there it has gone and brought relief."

The soldier should know that the Home Service of this society extends temporary assistance where needed when Government allowances are delayed, and even supplements the allotment and allowance where the income from these and other sources is inadequate to maintain a good standard of living. It extends regular aid to many having no legal claim on the Government, but who have been regularly aided by others previous to their entrance into the service. The Red Cross looks after the welfare of families and helps them to move from undesirable localities and protects them from bad housing conditions. These and many other unselfish services are rendered by this grand organization, and all this the soldiers should know, for with the knowledge that the interests of the families at home are safeguarded, the men at the front become better fighters and the army morale is promoted and sustained.

In this country enemy aliens have assailed the integrity of the Red Cross. "That would be dangerous in France in the presence of a poilu" before our own troops arrived.

All such energies as are contemplated in these suggestions should be put forth without stint to the end that the business may be prosecuted to a speedy finish. It is sometimes said we must prepare our house for conditions after the war. I am not so much concerned with what is going to happen after the war. But I am tremendously concerned with what is happening now, and concerned to see the things happen that I want to happen. I am not alarmed that after this the deluge. The deluge is here now and I prefer to expect the millenium afterwards, and the millenium it will be unless the allied nations be thwarted in their purpose by some strange dispensation of Providence. The Allies have been tried in the fiery furnace. The dross has been eliminated. The pure gold remains, and with it a glorified determination that when the sword of Prussia which "was drawn in dishonor, shall be sheathed in shame," and not till then will this awful business be finished.

This new Grand Army of the Republic, with its splendid equipment, which is rapidly landing upon the sacred soil of France, sacred to the memory of the brave dead of all the nations, and which we pledge our honor and services to sustain, has shown by its initial services that it is worthy to represent the "only flag that has never known defeat." It may well be true that the American Army has not yet opened the way to Berlin, but it has closed the way to Paris.

The enemy can have no hope now unless it is found in poor, helpless, broken, humiliated Russia, brought to her present plight through a couple of adventurous scamps, established where they could bring about this disaster through the insidious and powerful German propaganda. Even now we behold the spectacle of this hapless country feebly trying to collect itself, with hands outstretched to America, the one country on the face of the earth that it can trust, for help. We marvel at this spectacle when we read the striking language of Richard H. Dana, Jr., uttered a half century ago at a Boston banquet to the officers of the Russian fleet then visiting in American waters. Among other things he said:

"Russia has not only maintained peace with us, but has kindly and wisely done her best to keep us at peace with the world."

Again, speaking of the friendly and graceful message of Russia to America in our darkest hour, he said:

"Well did Mr. Seward, in reply, acknowledge that the friendship of Russia 'had its beginning with the national existence of the United States.'"

And the great scholar closed his speech on that memorable occasion with this touching sentiment:

"The friendship of Russia and America, beginning with our national existence, in our darkest hour showing no abatement, may it last as long as there shall be Russia in the old world and United States in the new."

Perhaps if we show no abatement of that traditional friendship in this, Russia's darkest hour, it may yet bear rich fruit.

The mighty hosts arrayed against the principle that might makes right are advancing at Armageddon. Armed with the invincible power of right, nothing can long stay or stop their march.

As the avalanche started to engulf fair France with all her wonderful history and traditions, merry old England, with about as much preparation as China might have, laid all she had ready on the altar and bravely accepted the sacrifice. Her ancient foe was in danger of losing the one thing that the English-speaking race holds beyond price—liberty.

When France asked England to give back the ashes of her great military captain, the prayer was graciously answered, and Elizabeth Barrett Browning puts the story in immortal verse:

“And England answered, in the courtesy
Which ancient foes, turned lovers, may befit,
Take back thy dead, and when thou buryest it
Throw in all former strifes twixt thee and me.”

Soldiers of France! What a thrill those words awaken. Soldiers of France and that silent sentinel, England's omnipotent navy, drew a line and inscribed thereon in letters of blood—Thus far, and awaited our coming. With what emotions France must have witnessed England's sacrifices! With what burning emotions France must witness America's coming to pay a century-old debt, but to pay it with compound interest. No imagination is rich enough, no brush delicate enough to paint these emotions. That laconic classic of four words credited to Gen. Pershing, “We are here, Lafayette,” uttered at the tomb of that patron saint of Liberty, contained the whole covenant. The proverb has it that eternal vigilance is the price, and where that is wanting as it was in this instance, infernal pounding must take its place.

When the heroes return after it's over over there, Bartholdi's statue enlightening the world will welcome them in New York harbor, and hold aloft the flaming torch of Liberty to light them into a safe haven of peace and rest; and then France's gift to America will take on a new significance and the whole world will seem to be illuminated by its sacred rays.

This war will strengthen and cement this country in all its higher purposes and aspirations and for all time as nothing else could do. Our defenders are fighting in foreign lands that this republic may not perish and that we may still repeat:

“My country, 'tis of thee!”

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next order of business is the report of the Secretary.

Charles E. Blanchard, of Columbus, read the report of the Secretary as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, August 26, 1918.

To The Ohio State Bar Association:

Your Secretary submits the following report for the past year:

The combined report of the proceedings of the last annual meeting held at Cedar Point, July 10th, 11th and 12th, 1917, and the proceedings of the mid-winter meeting held at Columbus, December 20th and 21st, 1916, constituting Volume 38, has been printed and distributed to the members of the Association, to a large number of law schools and law libraries, and to the exchange list of the Association throughout the United States.

By reason of the fact that Volume 38 contained the proceedings of the two meetings, and by reason of the increased cost of the printing and distribution of these volumes, the Executive Committee instructed the Secretary to print only the minutes of the proceedings of the two meetings, together with the annual address of the President. To comply with this order the discussions of reports of committees, resolutions, recommendations, motions and all addresses delivered before the Association, except the President's annual address, were eliminated from Volume 38.

The mid-winter meeting of the Association, which was to have been held in Cleveland during the month of December, 1917, was not held for the reason that it came at a time when a large number of the members of the Association were devoting their time to assisting registrants in filling out their questionnaires. This patriotic service was considered of paramount importance.

Notices were duly sent by the Secretary to all standing and special committees calling their attention to such matters as had been referred to them and urging all committees to take an active part in furthering the work of the Association.

The Secretary at various times throughout the year has been called upon by various committees engaged in war work, both in this state and in the nation, to furnish the names of lawyers from this state who were capable speakers and thoroughly patriotic. All of these requests were duly complied with.

The Secretary has received during the year annual reports from numerous state bar associations, all of which have been duly acknowledged and the reports turned over to the Supreme Court Librarian at Columbus, where all members of the bar may have access to them.

A letter signed by Mr. T. J. Keating, Acting President of the Association, and by the Secretary, together with a program of this meeting, was sent to each member of the Association some weeks prior to the date of the meeting. This letter suggested that small contributions be made by the members to defray the expense of the entertainment to be furnished by this Association to the American Bar Association at its meeting in Cleveland this week. The response of the members to this suggestion will appear more fully in the report of the Treasurer, to whom the money was to be sent.

The Secretary undertook to secure the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries of all the local bar associations in the state. Up to the present time this information has been received from thirty-nine local associations. In some instances it required two or three letters to obtain the information, and in other instances no response was ever made to any request. This experience shows that the Ohio Bar is not an efficiently organized working body.

Mr. Elihu Root has said: "It is the American Bar which is called upon to think and to form and lead opinion nationally and not locally. For the performance of this duty a great agency already exists in the American Bar Association."

If the National Bar is called upon to think and to form and lead public opinion in the nation, the Ohio Bar is called upon to think, and to form and lead public opinion in this state. And there ought to be a strong, virile, active agency through which the Ohio Bar could and would perform this duty. The nucleus of such an agency exists in the present Ohio State Bar Association; but every thoughtful member must admit that the present State Association does not reach or direct the opinion of the Ohio Bar as such, and does not lead or formulate the public opinion of the state in any united action upon any of the great problems or questions that confront us from time to time and which now confront us as an outgrowth of the great World War. It would seem, therefore, that some radical and aggressive measures must be taken in order that this Association may become the active agency through which the Ohio Bar may express its united opinion and action.

It has been suggested by at least one member of the Executive Committee of this Association that the result desired may at least be furthered, if not accomplished, by the appointment or election of a secretary who would be paid sufficient compensation to warrant the giving of all, or a greater portion of his time, to the work of the Association. Inasmuch as your present Secretary is not a candidate for such a position, and would not accept the same if it were tendered to him, he can with propriety bring this suggestion forward.

Such a secretary could conduct a perpetual campaign for new members, could organize local associations in every county in the state, could make these local associations working units in the State Association, and could build up an efficient organization worthy of the bar of this great state.

Some states have such organizations, notable examples of which are the States of New York, Massachusetts and Missouri. The Secretaries of these states are in constant touch and communication with every member and with every committee of the organization. Some state organizations with such Secretaries are publishing and distributing to its members, bulletins or quarterlies. The best example of such a quarterly is the "Massachusetts Law Quarterly," published by the Massachusetts Bar Association. Each volume of this quarterly contains more than one hundred pages devoted to matters of interest to the bar of the state and to the work of the association. The most recent attempt at publication along this line is that of the "Bar Bulletin," published monthly by the Missouri State Bar Association. This is one of the means by which these state associations are forming and leading public opinion and obtaining efficient co-operation on matters of importance.

Many other suggestions could be made in this connection, but they should not be discussed in this report, and the matter is only touched upon here for the purpose of pointing out that now is the time for this Association to move forward, to catch the spirit of the times and to become a potent factor in the activities of the State.

Members are particularly requested to register promptly upon arrival. Application blanks for membership may be obtained from the Secretary. The Secretary endeavors to keep the street address of each member, and prompt notification of changes is requested.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES E. BLANCHARD, Secretary.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—What shall be done with the report of the Secretary, gentlemen?

EDMUND B. KING, of Sandusky:—Mr. President, I move that the report be received to go upon the records, and that the recommendations of the Secretary be referred to a special committee to be appointed by the Chair, and to report on some plan to carry out the idea contained in the report.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—As members of the special committee, I appoint the following: Edmund B. King, of Sandusky; Allen Andrews, of Hamilton; and Arthur I. Vorys, of Columbus; and ask that this committee make its report at one of the sessions to follow.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next order of business is the report of the Treasurer.

THE SECRETARY:—Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Bar Association, possibly many of you do not know that our faithful Treasurer, Mr. Gilmore, is seriously ill at his home in Dayton, where he has been confined to his bed for many weeks. He forwarded to me all of the Treasurer's books and records, together with his report for the past year. The Treasurer's report reads as follows:

I have been obliged to omit the usual statement as to the membership of the association, except that 145 members are in arrears for non-payment of dues for 1917, and will be dropped from the rolls unless payment is made at this annual meeting.

Since the last annual meeting a number of the members of the Association have entered the service of the government in the great war. I have entered the names of such members as have come to my knowledge upon the membership record, but I am sure that my list is far from complete, and would suggest that some systematic steps be taken to ascertain the names of all members who are in the service, and that this roll of honor be published in our forthcoming report and that such members be exempt from dues to the association during the period of their service.

I regret very much that ill health prevents my being with you and presenting this, my fifteenth and final report as Treasurer of the Association. I deeply appreciate the honor that has been conferred upon me in this long continued service. I have only the pleasantest memories of the associations that have been brought about by my duties in the office of Treasurer; and in concluding this report I desire to express my thanks to Messrs. Blanchard and Buss for their assistance in these last few weeks, and to express my appreciation to the members of the association for their many courtesies during my fifteen years incumbency in this office.

Respectfully submitted,

CLEMENT R. GILMORE, Treasurer.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—Mr. Chairman, action upon this report will no doubt be deferred until the same is audited, but I think we ought to send Mr. Gilmore our sincere good wishes, affection, sympathy and regret that he is not with us at this meeting, and I move that such a message be sent.

The motion was duly seconded and unanimously carried.

The Secretary thereupon sent the following telegram to Clement R. Gilmore, Dayton:

“The Ohio State Bar Association, assembled, sends deep appreciation of your long and effective services, and sincerely hopes for your speedy recovery.”

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—What shall be done with the report of the Treasurer, gentlemen?

SMITH W. BENNETT, of Columbus:—I move that the report as made be approved, filed, and made a part of the records of these proceedings, without any reference to an auditing committee.

The motion was duly seconded and unanimously carried.

ENSIGN N. BROWN, of Youngstown:—Mr. President, I move that the suggestion made in the report of the Treasurer that members of The Ohio State Bar Association who are in the military or naval service of the United States Government be excused from the payment of dues while in such service, be adopted by this organization.

The motion was duly seconded and unanimously carried.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—Passing over the report of the Executive Committee, as there is nothing special for that Committee to report at this time, I call upon Mr. John F. Carlisle, of Columbus, for his report as Chairman of the Committee on Admissions.

Mr. John F. Carlisle, of Columbus, Chairman of the Committee on Admissions, presented the report as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON ADMISSIONS

The Ohio State Bar Association:

GENTLEMEN:—During the year earnest efforts have been made to increase the membership of the Association. Last November the Chairman of the Committee on Admissions communicated with each member asking that every effort be made to secure applications for membership. About half of the members replied to the letter, some with applications and checks enclosed. These were sent to the Secretary of the Association at once. In June the Chairman again addressed communications to the members of the Committee calling their attention to the Annual Meeting at Cleveland and requesting that they get busy at once and send as many applications as possible. Again about one-half of the Committee responded. The letters received stated that it was difficult to get applications and gave various reasons. Most of the younger lawyers are in the War and those that were not, and were not members of the Association, declared they needed every cent of their money for War Bonds, War Savings Stamps, Red Cross, War Chest and other War activities.

Your Committee on Admissions begs to submit the following:

The Committee has secured applications for membership in The Ohio State Bar Association, as follows:

Your Committee recommends that they be received as members of The Ohio State Bar Association.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN F. CARLISLE, Chairman.

WILLIAM L. HART, Secretary.

JOHN F. CARLISLE, of Columbus:—Mr. President, as Chairman of the Committee on Admissions, I recommend the election of these members, and I move that the Secretary be authorized to cast the unanimous vote of the Association for their election.

The motion was duly seconded and unanimously carried.

THE SECRETARY:—The Secretary casts the unanimous vote for the election of the applicants named to membership in the Association.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next thing on the program is the report of the Committee on Judicial Administration and Legal Reform. The Chairman, Judge E. B. Follett, is not present, but I understand someone else will make the report.

CURTIS E. McBRIDE, of Mansfield:—Mr. Chairman, as a member of that Committee I will say that we held a meeting in Columbus, but only four members were present, and the preparation of the report was left to Mr. F. T. Eagleson, who is not here, and I therefore ask that the report of the Committee go over until tomorrow.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next order of business is the report of the Committee on Legal Education, of which Mr. Charles B. Hunt, of Coshocton, is Chairman.

THE SECRETARY:—Mr. Chairman, permit me to say that Mr. Hunt wrote to me, stating that he had suffered a personal injury in a recent accident, and that he would be unable to be present at this meeting. He, however, has sent me the report of his Committee and has asked me to read the report of the Committee on Legal Education, which is as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LEGAL EDUCATION

To The Ohio State Bar Association:

The Committee has been unable to hold a meeting, but after correspondence with the various members, the Chairman and Secretary make the following recommendations, viz.:

1. The knowledge of Legal Ethics and thorough education along moral lines should be emphasized. If possible, a more thorough investigation as to moral character should be made when students are enrolled, so that weaknesses may be corrected.
2. The present requirements as to academic and professional education are approved. While the addition of a year to the time spent in professional studies would no doubt be beneficial, a requirement that during the Law School course, students should be required to have a certain period (say one year in all) of actual experience in some law office, might be just as helpful.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES B. HUNT, Chairman.

HENRY G. BINNS, Secretary.

A. C. SHATTUCK, JOHN B. WORLEY,

J. F. JORDAN, W. J. BECKLEY,

HARVEY D. GRINDLE, WM. F. DUNCAN,

GEORGE W. RITTER, CHARLES P. HINE.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—You have heard the report, gentlemen, with the recommendations. What shall be done with it?

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I move that the report be received and filed.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—We will now have the report of the Committee on Grievances.

WILLIAM J. GEER, of Galion, Chairman of the Committee on Grievances, presented the following report:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GRIEVANCES

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 27, 1918.

Mr. President and Members of The Ohio State Bar Association:

It gives your Committee great pleasure to report that in so far as their observation, investigation or experience has taken them within the last year, the lawyers of this Association have at least been of reasonably good behavior, and have dwelt together in unity, excepting only in so far as that unity has been disturbed by an occasional erroneous decision of some court of last resort or Nisi Prius. The lawyers seem to have been willing to live at peace, so far as possible, with all men; therefore, the only grievance we have to report is against the Kaiser, and that will be settled by a non-negotiated, dictated peace as soon as our boys with their allies march into and take possession of Berlin, which won't be long, we hope.

Respectfully submitted,

W. J. GEER, Chairman.

BURCH D. HUGGINS, Secretary.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—This report is very clear and distinct. What shall be done with it?

HUGO C. KOEHLER, of Alliance: I move that the report be received and filed.

Motion duly seconded and carried.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next committee to report is the Committee on Legal Biography.

Henry Baer, of Cincinnati, Chairman of the Committee on Legal Biography, presented the following report:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LEGAL BIOGRAPHY

To the Officers and Members of The Ohio State Bar Association:

The undersigned, your Committee on Legal Biography, submit this, their report, to you, this 26th day of August, 1918.

We are deeply grieved to learn and with sadness do report, that death has removed from our midst, during the last year, the following respected and esteemed and beloved members:

Charles W. Baker, died April 14, 1917, at Cincinnati.

Edward Barton, died August 15, 1917, at Cincinnati.

Frank M. Gorman, died March 23, 1918, at Cincinnati.

J. Wm. Johnson, died June 5, 1917, at Cincinnati.

Adam A. Kramer, died April 30, 1917, at Cincinnati.

Lipman Levy, died March 24, 1918, at Cincinnati.

Philip Renner, died November 23, 1916, at Cincinnati.

Walter B. Ritchie, died April 2, 1918, at Cincinnati.

John A. Shauck, died January 3, 1918, at Columbus.

John McSweeney, died at Wooster.

Joseph R. Johnston, died November 2, 1917, at Youngstown.

Your Committee does report and attach hereto, sketches of the life and character of the deceased members, which have been submitted to your Committee for report, as also, of Scott Bonham, Dennis F. Cash, whose deaths have heretofore been reported.

There have been many other deaths, among our members, but notice of same has not been brought to the Committee.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY BAER, Chairman.

MEMOIRS

CHARLES W. BAKER

Death came to Charles W. Baker, on Saturday evening, April 14, 1917, after an illness which had kept him at home for about one month. His wife (Mary Thorne) died some years ago. Two sons, Thorne and Chas. W., Jr., both members of the Cincinnati Bar, and a daughter, the wife of Ralph E. Clark, also a member of the local Bar, survive him and were present when the end came. The funeral was held from the residence, on Reading Road, Rev. Chas. E. Schenk, District Superintendent of the M. E. Church, officiating. The honorary pall-bearers were Thornton M. Hinkle, Ex-Judge D. D. Woodmansee, Ex-Judge William Worthington, Charles B. Wilby, Charles E. Wilson and Edward H. Ernst. The burial took place at Spring Grove Cemetery. Courts adjourned for the day, including the Probate Court, on account of the funeral.

Mr. Baker was born February 10, 1854, in this city, but his youth was spent in California, where his father was a minister of the Methodist Church. He was educated there, but returned to Cincinnati while still in his teens and studied law in the Cincinnati Law School, graduating therefrom before he had attained his majority. When only twenty-one he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Hamilton County and was given a re-election two years later, but before completing his second term he resigned to become county solicitor, an office which he held for one term. His opponent for county solicitor was J. B. Foraker, later Governor of the State and U. S. Senator. When Governor Foraker ran for the Senate the first time, Mr. Baker was his opponent, but in that race was unsuccessful. Several offers of a place on the Democratic ticket for Judge were declined by him because of a preference for the practice, but he became a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in Cincinnati in 1880, in St. Louis in 1888, and in Kansas City in 1900.

Mr. Baker's practice, which was always lucrative, was carried on alone until the coming of his sons to the Bar. He was successful in all lines, but was regarded as particularly skillful in will cases. He was one of the men who has stood at the forefront of the Bar for a generation. His figure was commanding and his work often of a character which attracted the public eye. His death is a shock, for very few had begun to think of him other than as in full tide of a successful career.

EDWARD BARTON

Edward Barton, Cincinnati, Ohio, died August 15, 1917.

Among the many distinguished men who have adorned the Bar of Hamilton County none was better entitled through the purity of his life, the uprightness of his character, the soundness of his judgment and his unremitting industry, to the respect and remembrance of the Bar than Edward Barton.

Born on a farm near Williamsburg in Clermont County, January 22, 1863, he obtained his early education in the common schools of that county, and after short periods of study at Farmers College at College Hill and at the University of Wooster, he entered upon the study of the law in Cincinnati and was admitted to the Bar in 1884, shortly after he became of age. For some years thereafter he engaged in the general practice, being for a part of the time associated with Messrs. Ramsey and Maxwell; and those who during that time met him in the courts, either as associate or adversary, can testify that while he fought hard and never gave up effort so long as the case had not been decided, his weapons were always clean and honorable, his victory left no sting in his adversary, and if defeat were his fate he accepted it with dignity.

On January 16, 1901, he was appointed General Attorney of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad Company, which position he filled up to the time of his death. For the discharge of his duties of that position he was eminently fitted. His wisdom in forming his opinions and his care in seeing that he formed none without full knowledge of the facts and careful study of the authorities enabled him in large measure to dispose without litigation of those claims against his client which were just, and to defend it successfully against those which were not. Those who were associated with him in the service of that company will long remember the purity of his life and thought, the wisdom of his advice and his unfailing courtesy and consideration for all with whom he came in contact.

His domestic life illustrated the truth of the saying that that nation or community is happiest which has no history. The bare record of it tells the whole. He was married December 18, 1889, to Miss Clara Robertson, of Cincinnati, and he leaves his widow and one son, now a member of the Hamilton County Bar, to mourn him.

Mr. Barton was in the best sense of the word a self-made man. Of sturdy American stock long settled in Clermont County, with only the early advantages which are open to the son of every American farmer, he rose by his own unaided efforts to the front ranks of an exacting profession, and affords the proof, if one were needed, that the time has not yet gone by, as we trust it never may, when industry and ability will win for any man an honorable place in the life of any American community.

SCOTT BONHAM

(Death reported in 1916; died November 1, 1915)

Scott Bonham was born in Stokes Township on a farm near Midway, Madison County, Ohio, January 25, 1858. He was a son of William J. and Letitia (Hays) Bonham, both of whom were natives of Fayette County, Ohio. He descended from original Scotch-Irish ancestors; however, an English ancestor, Dr. Thomas Bonham, holding a degree from Oxford University, practiced medicine in London, England, in 1606.

After receiving a public school education in his native village he pursued more advanced studies at the Bloomingburg (Ohio) Institute and the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. From the latter institution he was graduated in 1882 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. At the age of fifteen, before entering college, he began to teach school in country and village districts.

For a year following his graduation he occupied the position of Principal of Schools at West Unity, Ohio. He then qualified for the legal profession, first attending the law department of the University of Virginia and afterward the Cincinnati Law School, where he was graduated as Bachelor of Laws in 1882; and on May 28th of the same year he was admitted to the Bar of Ohio.

Embarking upon the practice of his profession in Cincinnati he soon advanced to success. For several years he served as attorney in Cincinnati for the Ohio Dairy and Food Commission. He delivered an address at the Congress of the Dairy and Food Commissioners of the United States at the World's St. Louis Fair on "Constitutionality of Pure Food Legislation." He was especially well known in the line of his profession as the representative of numerous building associations, insurance, railroad and other business interests. He was the author of the Ohio ten per cent law, applicable to necessities, which has proved alike beneficial to the retail merchant and his creditors.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Kate Kirkpatrick, of Los Angeles, who, with her son, S. B. Kirkpatrick, were present at the funeral; as were also another nephew, Guy F. Kirkpatrick, of Cleveland, and a niece, Mrs. Glenn K. Potts, of the same city.

Attorney Frank S. Bonham, who had been connected with Scott Bonham for six years in the law office in the Lincoln Inn Court, is a cousin.

Mr. Bonham was a bachelor, was prominent in Masonic circles and at one time was member of the City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Business Men's Club and the Cincinnati Bar Association. He held trusteeships in Ohio Wesleyan University and the Church of the Covenant.

DENNIS F. CASH

(Death reported in 1916; died January 13, 1916)

After having been confined to his home, 208 Hearne Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio, for six months as the result of a stroke of paralysis, Dennis F. Cash passed away at 3:30 p. m., January 13th, 1916. His illness is attributed by friends to the close application which he gave to the affairs of his office while in the municipal service under former Mayor Hunt.

Mr. Cash was a graduate of St. Xavier's College and the Cincinnati Law School. He was in his forty-eighth year. In the early period of his practice he was a member of the firm of Berry & Cash. He became Assistant Prosecuting Attorney under Henry Hunt and was largely instrumental in the reforms which Mr. Hunt inaugurated. Upon the election of his chief as Mayor he became Service Director and gave to the office the closest attention, which resulted in changes and the adding of new features, which attracted attention to the department by other cities.

Upon leaving the city hall, after the expiration of the term, Mr. Cash returned to the practice with offices in the First National Bank Building. His death will be regretted by a large circle of friends both in and out of his chosen profession.

FRANCIS M. GORMAN

Francis Michael Gorman, one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals for the First Ohio District, died at his home in Hartwell, Saturday afternoon, March 23, 1918. He had been ill for some time, but continued to fill his place on the Bench until the week of his death. His last journey to the city was made on March 16th, to attend the banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, but he was compelled to leave early and realized on his way home that he was suffering from some serious trouble. The last few hours of his life were passed in a state of unconsciousness.

Judge Gorman was born in this city September 4, 1857. His parents were both natives of Ireland. After obtaining a common school education, interspersed with more or less work on a farm, he took a course in what was then known as the National Normal University, located at Lebanon, graduating therefrom in 1878. In that day the Lebanon school had a large attendance and turned out many students who have made a place for themselves in the world as teachers, lawyers, physicians and business men. Some of them are at the Cincinnati Bar today.

Following his graduation young Gorman taught for five years, and then entered the law office of the late T. D. Lincoln. His office reading was supplemented with a course in the Cincinnati Law School, from which he graduated in 1884. After practicing alone for two years, a partnership was formed with the late Charles M. Thompson, which was continued for fifteen years or more under the firm name of Gorman & Thompson. A partnership followed with Philip Roettinger, under the name of Roettinger & Gorman, which was continued until the election of the junior member to the Common Pleas Bench in 1909. At the conclusion of his term of six years, Judge Gorman became a candidate for the Court of Appeals and was elected to succeed Judge Peter F. Swing. In his early professional career he ran for County Solicitor, but was defeated by the late W. A. Davidson. Judge Gorman leaves a widow, who is a daughter of the late George M. Herancourt, a married daughter and two sons who are students at Harvard

J. WM. JOHNSON

J. William Johnson died June 5, 1917, at his home on Glenwood Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. He was born in Wales, November 15, 1842, and his parents came to this country in 1844, going first to Cumberland, Md., and settling later in Pomeroy, Ohio, where Mr. Johnson received his early education. At the breaking out of the Civil War he became assistant to Captain, late Colonel C. W. Moulton, Quartermaster U. S. Army. After the war Mr. Johnson entered Harvard and later the Cincinnati Law School in 1867.

The old law firm was Moulton, Bateman and Johnson, and in later years Johnson & Levy. Lipman Levy died March 24, 1918, aged 82 years.

Mr. Johnson is survived by his widow, Belle Morse Johnson, who is a daughter of Charles E. Morse, of Maine.

ADAM KRAMER

Adam A. Kramer died at his home, corner of Washington and Forest Avenues, Avondale, a few minutes after 11 o'clock, April 30, 1917. He had been ill for nearly two years, when it was thought he was better. He was able to visit his law offices in the Union Trust Building, which he did every week day, except Saturday, and would remain for two hours or more, and it was then believed he might live for several years, but disease had made greater inroads than was known, and the end came quickly and painlessly.

Mr. Kramer was seventy years of age. He was born in Pennsylvania, but his parents removed to Cincinnati when he was a mere child. He obtained his education here, and graduated from the Cincinnati Law School in 1868, and in 1875 was admitted to practice in the U. S. Supreme Court. He practiced in this city all of his life. For many years the firm was headed by the late Alexander Long—Long, Kramer & Kramer, and later Avery, Kramer & Kramer. After the death of Judge Avery the firm became Kramer & Kramer, which continued until a few years ago, when the junior member (Mr. Louis Kramer, a brother) withdrew and formed the present firm of Kramer & Bettman.

Mr. Kramer was an able lawyer, and accumulated quite a fortune in the mercantile practice. He leaves a widow but no children.

LIPMAN LEVY

Lipman Levy was born August 25, 1836, and died March 24, 1918. He came to Cincinnati, Ohio, from Manchester, England, August, 1848, and attended the Cincinnati public schools. He followed mercantile pursuits from 1855 until 1874. He then at the age of thirty-eight, retired from business and began the study of law, attending the Cincinnati Law School in 1874-75, graduating from said school and being admitted to the Bar in the spring of 1875. While pursuing the study of the law he was in the law offices of Moulton, Johnson and Blinn, of whom Charles W. Moulton was a brother-in-law of U. S. Senator John Sherman. Mr. Blinn retiring from the firm in October, 1876, Mr. Levy was admitted to the partnership, the firm name becoming Moulton, Johnson & Levy, maintaining office both in Cincinnati and New York. In January, 1888, upon the death of Col. Moulton, the firm continued under the name of Johnson & Levy and so remained until the death of Mr. Levy. Subsequently Clyde P. Johnson, the son of J. Wm. Johnson, and David M. Levy, the son of Lipman Levy, were admitted as members of the partnership. The passing of J. Wm. Johnson in 1917 and the retirement from practice of Lipman Levy in June, 1917, left their two sons to continue the practice of law under the old firm name of Johnson & Levy.

The firm of Johnson & Levy had quite a large insurance and mercantile business. Mr. Levy was prominently identified with The Union of American Hebrew Congregations of which he was the executive secretary from 1873 to 1917, when he retired from active duty.

In 1860 Mr. Levy married Henrietta Feder. Seven children survive him, his wife having predeceased him. Three grandsons of Mr. Levy are in the service of their country. Lieut. Robert Seitner and Frederic A. Johnson, Jr., are now in France, while Nathaniel Spear, Jr., is enlisted in the navy.

The closing months of Mr. Levy's life were spent in Atlantic City. His mind was clear and his interest keen to the last in everything that meant happiness to those about him. Mr. Levy was a lawyer of excellent ability, of high, sterling character. He leaves the priceless legacy of an honored name to his children and grandchildren.

PHILIP RENNER

(Died at Cincinnati, November 23, 1916)

Mr. Renner was a member of the law firm of Renner & Renner, his brother, Otto J., being his associate. Besides Otto J. Renner, he is survived by his widow and August J. and George Renner, brothers; Attorney Miller W. Renner, a son, and Mrs. Blaine Goyert and Miss Muriel Renner, daughters. George Renner is Jury and Assignment Commissioner, Common Pleas and Superior Courts.

Attorney Renner was born in Cincinnati fifty-three years ago. After receiving a grade school education he went into the law office of the late I. J. Miller. He was twelve years old at the time and studied law so diligently he was graduated with honors from the Cincinnati Law School.

Turning his attention to politics he accepted the nomination for member of the Board of Education on the Democratic ticket in the Twelfth Ward. Although the ward was nominally Republican, he was elected by a substantial majority. His victory attracted the attention of Democratic leaders in Cincinnati and Hamilton County, and he was invited to sit in the counsels of the party thereafter. For years he was an active worker in the ranks of the party, although he never would yield to insistent and fervent pleas to become a candidate for a city or county office after he had served in the Board of Education.

But strong pressure was brought to bear on him a few years ago, and he accepted a nomination for Judge of Supreme Court on the Democratic ticket. It was a year in which the party's fortunes were at the lowest ebb, and he was defeated. His law practice in the last few years engaged his entire time and attention, and he ceased to take the interest in politics he had in earlier years.

Mr. Renner married Miss Mary Gansman, who was born and educated in Cincinnati.

He was a member of the Business Men's and the Cuvier-Press Clubs. His affiliations with secret orders were with Carson Lodge, F. & A. Masons, and Odd Fellows. Judge W. B. Alexander and Charles Dickhoff are brothers-in-law of Attorney Renner.

WALTER B. RICHIE

Walter Buckingham Richie was born January 24, 1851, in Van Wert County, Ohio. He was reared upon a farm, educated in the public schools, and for a time taught a country school. He read law with the firm of Ballard & Richie, of Lima, Ohio, of which firm his older brother, John E. Richie, was a member. He was admitted to the bar April 2, 1875. Just after his admission, he removed to Bucyrus, Ohio, remaining there in practice for about three years when he returned to Lima, entering into partnership with his brother, John E. Richie, afterwards Judge of the Common Pleas Court of said County, where he remained in continuous practice up to the time of his death, April 2, 1918.

His early educational advantages were somewhat limited, but throughout his life he was not only a student of the law but of literature and as a result acquired a liberal education. He was a constant reader of all the current events of the times, as well as of standard authors of English literature. He read thoroughly and well; was a thinker of the pronounced type; read between the lines and saw the sidelights from the author's standpoint. He was accurate, polished, eloquent and a master of English in his composition and addresses; one whom it was a pleasure and delight to hear, and was most entertaining in his private conversation. He was public spirited. Neither the City of Lima nor any public enterprise ever called upon him for support and was refused. He was always genial in his manner and devoted in his friendship; was among the first to visit a home of mourning or in distress, and was ready to give a kindly help. He was charitable to a large degree. Even in the hours of continuous suffering, he gave all comers a kind word and a genial smile. He was a kind and indulgent father; was a whole-hearted and generous neighbor.

He was fortunate in that his older brother preceded him in the law, affording him opportunity otherwise difficult to achieve. It was thus with high resolve, energy and industry he acquired his legal education and fitted himself for the practice of that profession which he adorned.

He never sought official preferment, believing rather that the private station was the post of honor.

For more than forty years he practiced his profession and became a leader at the Allen County Bar. As a lawyer he was careful and painstaking in the preparation of his cases. He was frank, fair and honest with the Court and his adversaries, and thereby gained their respect and confidence. While the general practice of law was the theater of action, it was as an advocate that he appeared at the greatest advantage.

Careful study and preparation developed his natural qualifications. His alertness was such that he seemed to almost divine the course of his adversary before he had spoken, and his answer presented itself spontaneously; his reasoning logical and luminous. His replies were always courteous, so that his advocacy was always appropriate, forceful and effective. As a lawyer his memory will be honored and emulated by those who seek to attain the best.

He was highly honored and respected among his friends and acquaintances in social relations, because his moral worth was acknowledged by them. He was a Past Grand Chancellor of Knights of Pythias of the World, and was the author of the present Ritual of the K. of P. order.

He sought always to efface himself and promote the welfare of others, for Walter B. Richie above all things was a gentleman. His good name in all the various relations of life was well deserved. His death is distinctly a public loss, and to those who knew him intimately, a sad bereavement.

JOSEPH R. JOHNSTON

Joseph R. Johnston was born September 12, 1840, in Jackson Township, Mahoning County, Ohio, and died November 2, 1917. He was educated in the public schools of Jackson Township, and at the Hine Academy at Canfield, the latter being at that time quite a celebrated institution of learning.

Before completing his education, at the beginning of the Civil War, he enlisted as a private soldier in Company E of the Second Ohio Cavalry. After serving for some time in that body, he was transferred to the 25th Ohio Battery, and continued with that Battery as Second Lieutenant until he was mustered out in 1864.

Upon his return home he entered the Probate office of Mahoning County, Ohio, as Clerk under Judge Giles Van Hynning, the then Probate Judge, and immediately commenced the study of law under him. He was admitted to the Bar of Mahoning County, Ohio, on his twenty-sixth birthday, September 12, 1866, and within a short time thereafter was elected Judge of the Probate Court in succession to his preceptor, Judge Van Hynning.

He served two terms as Judge of the Probate Court of this County with credit to the office and honor to himself, and immediately upon the expiration of his term of office entered into partnership in the practice of law with his former preceptor, and continued to practice as a member of the firm of Van Hynning & Johnston until the death of Judge Van Hynning in 1884.

During that time he was elected to the Senate of the State of Ohio, and again re-elected; his service terminating in 1879. In 1886 he was elected Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the Second Sub-Division of the Ninth Judicial District of Ohio, and served as such Judge until 1897. At that time he resumed the practice of law in the City of Youngstown, Ohio, to which place he had removed during his term of office, and continued in practice until a short time before his death.

During all of the time he was engaged in the active practice of the law, he enjoyed a large and desirable practice, being especially prominent in Probate practice. For the last three years of his life he was unable, by reason of physical infirmity, to engage actively in practice, but acted almost up to the time of his death as an advisor and counselor to many of his old clients and friends.

He early became affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic and took an active and prominent part in its affairs, and served in almost every official position in that order, the last of which was Department Commander for the State of Ohio.

His duties in that last office so overtaxed his strength, so that he was unable to continue in active life long afterwards.

Judge Johnston was a good soldier, he was careful, scrupulously honest, conservative in his advice and counsel, and untiring in his devotion to the interests of his clients. He was considerate of the rights of his adversaries, but unswerving in his determination that his own clients should receive their just dues.

Both as a practitioner and as a Judge he was the personification of kindness to the younger and more inexperienced members of his profession. While engaged in active practice it was his delight to have associated with him in his office some young man commencing his professional life, and to him he was a wise preceptor and advisor. While on the Bench he, as far as was consistent with even handed justice, aided the younger and inexperienced lawyer who appeared before him, but he never allowed his friendships or kindness to swerve him in the slightest degree from the straight line of his duty. The Records of the Courts of this Sub-division bear witness to the care and study which he gave to legal matters coming before him, and it can safely be said that no man either preceded or succeeded him upon the Bench, has had fewer judgments reserved by the Court of final resort. He was interested, during all of his life, and participated in every movement for the betterment and advantage of the community or State.

His private life was a model; devoted for years to his wife, who long preceded him in death, her memory was kept sacred with him. He was not ostentatious in his charities, but those who knew him most intimately, knew that he was generous to those whom he believed were in need of assistance, particularly to children and the aged.

A brave soldier, an honest lawyer, an upright Judge, a kind husband, a good citizen: Such was Judge Johnston, and his long life may well be emulated by those who follow him.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—What is your pleasure with respect to this report?

A MEMBER:—I move that the report be accepted, placed on file and printed in the proceedings of the Association.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—The next report is that of the Committee on Legislation, of which committee Harlan F. Burket, of Findlay, is Chairman.

THE SECRETARY:—Mr. Chairman, Mr. Burket is not at this meeting, but I received a letter from him dated August 10, 1918, which reads as follows:

"Your letter of June 19th received concerning the meeting of The Ohio State Bar Association, and I beg to advise that owing to the fact that there was no meeting of the legislature, the Committee on Legislation has no report to make.

"I probably will attend the meeting of the Association at Cleveland, but may not be there when the report of the Committee is called for. If this should be the case, will you make an informal report to the Association on the basis of this letter?

Yours very truly,

H. F. BURKET, Chairman."

THE ACTING-PRESIDENT:—This concludes the exercises for this afternoon, and we will now take a recess until eight o'clock this evening.

SECOND SESSION

Monday evening

Eight o'clock

August 26, 1918

The session was called to order by Acting-President Thomas J. Keating, who announced that the Association had as its guests during this session members of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

The Acting-President then introduced Honorable William A. Blount, of Pensacola, Florida, President of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, who then addressed the meeting on the subject "Uniform State Laws."

After the address of Mr. Blount the meeting was adjourned until ten o'clock the following morning.

THIRD SESSION

Tuesday morning

Ten o'clock

August 27, 1918

The session was called to order by the Secretary, who announced that the Acting-President, Mr. Thomas J. Keating, was quite ill and had been taken to his home in Columbus, and that the Executive Committee of the Association had selected Mr. Allen Andrews, of Hamilton, to preside during the remaining sessions of the Association.

Mr. Allen Andrews was called to the Chair.

ALLEN ANDREWS, Chairman:—Members of The Ohio State Bar Association, I am quite sure that we feel very sorry that Mr. Keating has been called away, and especially on account of ill health. He has been suffering, I am informed, for some time. We all entertain hopes that he will have a speedy recovery.

On this morning's program we were to have an address by Honorable Edwin A. Krauthoff, of Washington, D. C., on the subject, "The Inter-Relation of State and Federal Legislation." The Secretary has received word from Mr. Krauthoff that on account of war work in Washington, D. C., he is unable to be present and address us at this meeting. It has been suggested that we adjourn this session as quickly as possible and that the members attend the Conference of the Delegates of the State and Local Bar Associations, which will convene this forenoon at the Hotel Winton, and to be presided over by Mr. Elihu Root. Now what is the pleasure of the Association?

ENSIGN N. BROWN, of Youngstown:—Before adjourning, I suggest that the members of the Association from the various judicial districts meet and elect members to the various standing committees.

Under direction of the Chairman, the members of the Association present from each of the Common Pleas Judicial Districts of Ohio, existing prior to 1914, met and chose from their respective districts one Vice-President and one member of each of the following committees: Executive, Membership, Legal Education, Grievances, Legal Biography, Legislation and Judicial Administration and Legal Reform.

C. C. MIDDLESWART, of Marietta:—Mr. Chairman, I move that we adjourn until two o'clock this afternoon.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

FOURTH SESSION

Tuesday afternoon

Two o'clock

August 27, 1918

CHAIRMAN ALLEN ANDREWS:—The first number on the program is a memorial to that distinguished and honored jurist, whose memory we all cherish, the Honorable John A. Shauck, who gave so much of his life to the development and to the interpretation of our law, and who was last year chosen as our President, and who died during the year. His memorial is to be given to us this afternoon, and I now have the pleasure to present to you the Honorable Maurice H. Donahue.

Judge Donahue delivered the memorial as follows:

MEMORIAL TO JUDGE JOHN A. SHAUCK

Mr. President and Gentlemen of The State Bar Association:

It is well for this Association to pause in its deliberations and give some thought to the memory of men who were so recently a part of it. The remorseless hand of time moves steadily forward. One by one, we drop from the activities of life into the sleep eternal. We, who for the moment survive our brethren, should at least "take note of their departure."

At our last annual convention, this Association honored itself by electing as its President one of the foremost lawyers and jurists of Ohio. While he had then reached and passed "three score year and ten," nevertheless, he was still so vigorous in mind and body, that those who knew and loved him best, reasonably contemplated for him, years of activity in his chosen profession, and then, quietly and serenely, passing into the twilight of the evening of life—leisure to enjoy in his home and family circle the association of his friends and the memories of the events of a lifetime of honorable and distinguished service to his state and to his fellowman.

But this pleasing hope was not to be realized. In a few months after his election as President of this Association, disease sapped the vitality of his body, and death wrote the final chapter of a life that had redeemed every early promise of usefulness.

Judge John Allen Shauck was a man of more than passing interest. He was a man of marvelous intellectual endowment, strong but pleasing personality, erudite, capable and self-reliant.

He loved his profession, and gave to it not only his undivided devotion and untiring industry, but also the full strength of his forceful intellectuality.

For fifteen years he was engaged in the practice of law in the city of Dayton, Ohio, and from the threshold of his professional career, manifested the wonderful ability, zeal, and integrity that marked the whole course of his long and useful life.

In the discharge of his duty to his clients, he was fearless, aggressive, and capable—but always courteous and affable in his demeanor toward court and opposing counsel. He possessed a clear and quick sense of humor, that not only lent strength and interest to his forensic efforts, but always made him the central figure in any group of men of which he was a part. When still a young man he met and measured weapons in the judicial forum with some of the ablest and most experienced lawyers of this state, and by his ability, fairness, and scholarly attainments, soon won their confidence and respect. No cause committed to his keeping was ever lost through any lack of knowledge of the law or want of industry on his part.

After this experience in the active practice of the law, he entered upon a judicial career, that ended by his voluntary retirement but a short time before his death.

The perfect judge has not yet been born and probably never will be, unless perchance the human race shall at some time in the course of the coming ages, arrive at perfection; nevertheless, the name of Judge Shauck stands high among those who have approached the limits of human possibilities in the judicial field of labor.

In addition to his education, natural ability and profound knowledge of the law, he possessed a rugged honesty and moral courage that especially fitted him for the grave and serious responsibilities of a judge. He was a plain, blunt, practical man—a lawyer in every sense of the word. He worshipped no strange gods, was a disciple of no phantasy, pursued no “will-o’-the-wisp” of fame or fortune, but quietly, earnestly and industriously gave himself wholly to the work he had chosen to do, and for which he was so thoroughly equipped by nature and education.

While at all times Judge Shauck kept even step with the progress of human events, nevertheless, he always manifested a wholesome respect for the accumulated wisdom of the ages, of which each succeeding generation is the heir. He realized that when a court of last resort had determined a controversy, that the overruling of that decision would necessarily work grievous hardship upon the people of the state who had in good faith conformed their personal conduct and business transactions in line therewith. That a change by judicial interpretation of the law as established by such former decision, necessarily has an ex-post-facto or retro-active operation that is contrary to the spirit if not to the letter of the constitution of the state. He was firm in the opinion that where a court of last resort had failed in the correct interpretation or application of a law, or where such interpretation no longer met the necessities of changed conditions, that it was the duty of the law-making power of the state to amend or repeal that law, or to supply by statute a correct interpretation of the former act, for in such event, the new law operated only from the date of its passage. If the general assembly failed in this regard, or, predicated its action upon such judgment, traveled to greater lengths along the road of error and mistake, he was not slow to call a halt, but at the same time formulated a decree so as to avoid as far as possible, disastrous consequences to those who had relied, and had a right to rely, upon the former judgment of this court.

Where, however, new legislation to meet new conditions came before the court for interpretation and application, he was ever guided by the light of larger experience and more modern ideas as to the purpose and the reason of the law. He traveled neither too fast nor too slow, but there was ever method and meaning in his progress, and absolute fairness and justice to everyone interested in the far-reaching effect of a judgment of a court of last resort.

To him, the written constitution was not only the organic law, but the paramount law of the state, to which all other laws must yield. As a judge, he never quarrelled either with the provisions of the constitution, or the acts of the General Assembly of Ohio, regardless of his own personal opinion as to the wisdom or the unwisdom thereof. He understood that it is not the duty or the privilege of a court to write the laws of the state, but rather to interpret and apply the law as written, and he also understood that these laws reflected the intelligence of the people of the age in which he lived, and he never pretended to be wiser than his day and generation.

In the disposition of causes he was absolutely fearless. He gave no thought or concern to the consequences to himself. He kept no "ear to the ground" to ascertain the popular side of a controversy; he "trimmed no sails" to the shifting winds of public opinion; he never assumed any "holier than thou" attitude; he never descended to the use of catchy phrases to attract public attention to himself, or indulged in legal persiflage to obscure the meaning or avoid the enforcement of a plain mandate of the constitution or a statute of the state; and above all this, he never prostituted his high office to win popular applause or the friendship and support of any man or any class of men.

As a judge, he typified the character described by Horace in his masterful "Ode to Integrity":

"Not the rage of a people pressing to hurtful measures; not the aspect of a threatening tyrant, can move from his settled purpose the man who is just and determined in his resolution."

He was a man of splendid poise. During all the time that I was associated with him upon the Supreme Bench of the State, I never knew him to lose that perfect self-control which seemed to be a part and parcel of his personality, or to permit anger or prejudice to warp his judgment or place him at any disadvantage in the discussion of questions coming before that court for judicial determination. He was always calm, suave, deliberate, courteous and capable. Thoroughly honest himself, he never questioned the honesty or integrity of another whose opinions did not coincide with his own. On the contrary, he was not only tolerant of the opinions of others, but, having no purpose to serve other than to arrive at a right judgment in the cause under consideration, he invited the expression of opposing views and listened patiently and considered carefully the reasons assigned in support thereof.

His opinions are clear, lucid, and of easy understanding. They evidence not only his invincible logic, but also his wonderful power of analysis. He was a master of the English language. He was never at a loss for the right word to express an idea. When either a lawyer or a layman has finished reading an opinion written by Judge Shauck, he will understand the exact question in controversy, the judgment of the court, and the reason for that judgment.

Col. Wm. A. Taylor, in his splendid tribute to Januarias McGahan, expressed an eternal truth in these beautiful lines:

"Not stately verse, nor trumpets blowing fame;
Not praise from lips of matchless eloquence,
Not monumental piles, nor epitaphs,
Funeral pomp, nor all combined,
Can make man other than he fashions for himself,
Out of warp and woof of circumstance."

The life and labors of Judge Shauck as a jurist need neither epitaph upon his tomb, nor testimony from the lips of living witnesses. He fashioned for himself, by his forceful and erudite exposition of legal principles, by his clear reasoning and analytical powers, a monument in the judicial reports of this state that will reveal to the coming generation, as they have revealed to this generation, the absolute integrity, honesty, and ability of the man—a monument that will endure as long as men love truth and right and justice.

The record of Judge Shauck's judicial career is an open book, upon every page of which is recorded fidelity to his official oath to administer justice without respect to persons, and faithfully and impartially to discharge and perform all the duties incumbent upon him as judge, according to the best of his ability and understanding.

Judge Shauck's character was builded along lines of splendid proportion. He despised littleness in human character, and was never slow in expressing his contempt for it. There was in him no element of the hypocrite. He never hesitated to express himself freely and forcibly upon any subject. He never spoke "fair to the face and evil to the back" of any man. He was intensely patriotic. Although of German parentage, he had no sympathy with Prussian militarism, that for the last half century has slowly but surely despoiled the manhood, yes, and the womanhood of the "Fatherland."

Long before our country became involved in this war with the powers of central Europe, he expressed in the most vigorous language he could command, his supreme contempt for that "kultur" the highest ambition of which seems to be to murder and pillage, to torture and destroy.

It would have been a great consolation to him in the closing hours of his life, had he but lived long enough to see the "Beast of Berlin" crushed and beaten, and the whole of the Hohenzollern tribe stripped of power and made to feel the just wrath of an outraged civilization.

In private life, Judge Shauck maintained the same high standard of manhood that distinguished him in his professional career. Always kind and courteous, considerate of others, a congenial companion and a loyal and unselfish friend. A man of high ideals he met every duty and responsibility with a courage and fidelity that added dignity and purpose even to the commonplace ordinary affairs of everyday life. In his home "love was law," a law that barred at the threshold all the meaner emotions of the human heart. Mutual confidence, mutual respect, mutual love, were the psychological trinity, the kinetic forces, that ever guarded and protected the peace and the happiness of his fireside.

To the wife and daughter who have been bereaved of this husband and father, we can offer no greater consolation than the happy memories of the many years that it was their privilege to occupy this near and dear relation to such a man.

THE CHAIRMAN:—What is the pleasure of the Association regarding the memorial?

SIDNEY G. STRICKER, of Cincinnati:—Mr. Chairman, I move that the memorial be printed as a part of the proceedings of this body, and that a copy be sent to the wife and the daughter of Judge Shauck, and that a vote of thanks be extended to Judge Donahue for the splendid memorial he has presented.

Motion duly seconded and unanimously carried.

THE CHAIRMAN:—Among the distinguished men who presided over this Association in the years that are past, and who was a credit and an honor to our Association, and who served us well in public life and in private life, was the Honorable Virgil P. Kline, and we are to have a memorial on his life. I have the pleasure of presenting Mr. J. M. Henderson, of the Cleveland Bar.

Mr. Henderson delivered the memorial as follows:

MEMORIAL TO HONORABLE VIRGIL P. KLINE

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Bar Association:

On the 17th day of January, 1917, after a day spent in his office and an evening spent in his library, Virgil P. Kline, in apparently robust health, retired to sleep and in the morning without any note of alarm having come from him to his family, was dead. I come to speak such words as may serve in some manner, to bring to your notice or call to your recollection those things which may best enable you to preserve him in memory.

For a period of almost fifty years this man has been known to all persons who had occasion to be about the courts of this county or who had business of consequence therein, and for almost as long a time his name has been frequently upon the lips of a great number of people who came in no personal contact with him, but only knew him by the reputation which he had acquired, so that the sudden termination of his life arrested much attention.

Descended from Revolutionary ancestry, but born of humble parentage, he has passed away after holding for many years the confidence of our largest men of affairs, the acquaintance of many of the country's principal lawyers and public men, and the esteem and regard of that body of judges and advocates before and among whom his work was done. It was a long and arduous journey for him to have passed from the surroundings of his boy-hood to the position we must accord to him at the last. It may not be without instruction to us, or encouragement to those who are striving without clear vision of the future, to briefly recount the principal incidents of his life. Born in 1844, a lawyer at twenty-six, and dead at seventy-two. He had the common village school to begin with, which, with its few courses of study seems to best impress upon the mind of the boy such mysteries as there may be in numbers and by the selections of its course of readers to call his attention to the world of literary production open to his view and enjoyment. With an impulse thus gained to literary activity he is found at the age of sixteen in association with a school companion who afterwards attained political distinction in one of the northwestern States, engaged as the publisher of a 9 x 11 sheet called the Young American, devoted to the reproduction of current prose and poetry and contemporary news. As the persons having the proprietorship and engaged in the editing and manual production of the sheet were not in political accord, political articles were not contributed.

The Academy at Hiram, Ohio, not remote from his home, furnished him opportunity for a test of his aptness for higher education and opened the way for the riper work done by him at Williams College, where he graduated at the age of twenty-two. While at this College, finding that he was not certainly inferior in scholarship to many of the young men who were aspiring to professional life, he determined to become a lawyer, and, as was then generally the case, he took up the study of law in a lawyer's office, that of Albert T. Slade, of this city, with whom he was afterwards associated; but before admission to the Bar came the only serious and distressing period of his life—broken health, exhaustion and weakness, accompanied by some bleeding from the lungs, and the feeling of depression and despair. Then came the fortunate interposition of his brother-in-law, a physician who resided in Wisconsin, who, learning of his condition, called him to his home and prescribed such constant life in the open air, winter and summer, as forced him, though with gun and rod in hand, to live for months out-of-doors and often alone. By some mystery he was in this way in a few months restored to health, and fortunately, as I suppose, retained from the treatment the taste for life in the open which served him for so many years as his principal recreation during his summer vacations. In the meantime, however, the small fund he had counted on to carry him to the time when he should enter his profession was exhausted, and two years were spent by him as superintendent of the high school at Cuyahoga Falls, a period of his life which was very pleasing to him and to which he often adverted in conversation. During this time he had, however, found time to complete his studies and on being admitted to the Bar came at once to Cleveland and entered the office of Mr. Slade.

The position of a young man who is a comparative stranger in a city and who seeks professional business is, at best, not encouraging. He, however, turned to account every opportunity. I think the first notice the lawyers in general had of him came less from personal contact, than by way of rumor that a young man named Kline had developed some rather effectual methods of reaching the approval and consequent favor of the justices of the peace, whose offices were, at that time, in the lower part of the city. In time, as he came to be known, it was discovered that his methods of thus reaching the favor of the justices resulted not from any extraneous circumstances, but from work of preparation, not only of law and evidence, but as well of a higher tone of argument than was customary in such tribunals. He had found these courts a good training ground, and was giving to their deliberations the care and attention which was agreeable to the justices. It must have involved an expenditure of work out of all proportion to the compensation he received, if the cases alone were to be considered. It served, however, the better purpose of calling attention to him as a man of promise, and about this time his name appears as associated with that of Mr. Slade, who had not long been in practice, but who was a man of fine character, with many friends. This connection continued for four years, during which time he was furnished opportunities for participating in the trial of cases in the Common Pleas Court and making the acquaintance of the older lawyers. Upon the death of Mr. Slade in 1876, I became associated with him, and from that time for a period of about seventeen years, I had every opportunity which such association could give of knowing him. I would say that during this period I have known of no one more painstaking and industrious in his work. There was constant development in that feature of it which he most enjoyed and to which he was so well adapted, namely, the trial of cases. During this period, as opportunity afforded, it was not unusual for him to take home with him at night the statement of facts of a case reported in one of the Ohio State Reports, which would be read to him without his having read or heard read the syllabus, so that after consideration over night he might announce in the morning his opinion as to the law of the case, and compare it with that of the court, and, if he was in error, make a study of the case.

Whether this practice of associating the decision with a known state of facts, furnished the best way of learning the law involved in the case I do not know, but it certainly familiarized him with the points decided and with the course of decisions relating to it. With this course of examination of cases, added to that which he gave in working out other cases arising in the office, I would say that his knowledge of all that was made law by the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio up to Volume 20 at least, of the State Reports, became equal to that of any of his fellows then practicing here.

At that time there was no Sherman law, certainly no Valentine law, and hardly any clearly defined and enforceable laws regulating rates for railway transportation—a condition of things taken advantage of by large shippers in securing discrimination in rates in one form and another as against the smaller shipper.

About the year 1881 or 1882 a suit was begun on behalf of Scofield and others against the Lake Shore Railway Company for a mandatory injunction requiring it to render to the plaintiffs like services for a like compensation to that allowed some of the very large shippers. It was the first action of the kind prosecuted or reported in the state, and, strange as it may now seem, much difficulty was made over it by the lower courts. The claim was boldly made by the defendant of a right to grant to the larger shipper a lower rate in consideration of the larger tonnage and the better facilities for loading and unloading and the preventing of a diversion of the business to the lake boats in summer time. The District Court, which then was the appellate court from the Common Pleas, considered the case as one so intricate as to require reservation to the Supreme Court, where a judgment was rendered fixing the law as we know it, and as it has been often affirmed and supplemented by statutory enactment; the case, as may seem strange to us now, taking up some fifty pages of one of the reports.

In the bringing, preparation and trial of this case, Mr. Kline was very greatly interested and exercised very great diligence of preparation and readiness in trial, with the result that he was brought to the attention of men conducting large business affairs. Within a short time thereafter he was retained as attorney for The Standard Oil Company of Ohio, and from this time he necessarily gave much of his work and time to the affairs of this company and the affairs of companies with which it had dealings or with which it was co-operating.

By this time also his general reputation as a trial lawyer was becoming well fixed, so that he was often solicited to act with other attorneys in the trial of their cases. Readiness to assist others was ever in his make-up and the work was to his liking, so that this class of employment was rarely declined, with the result that he took on and continued to do work largely that of the barrister, that is, after a consultation and survey of the case, to receive from others the facts and the briefs, and to devote his skill to the matter of the strongest and most favorable presentation to the court or jury, or both. Of course, this has not been his exclusive work, for much duty of counsel and of preparation of papers and general office work went with the nature of his employment as general attorney for the large interests he was called on to represent from time to time.

About this time Mr. S. H. Tolles became associated with us and with his assistance in the general business of the office even more opportunity was given to Mr. Kline for the duties of advocacy which called him at times out of the city. During the year 1894 our relations as partners were severed, at which time Mr. Goff, now President of The Cleveland Trust Company, and Mr. Carr, now deceased, became associated with him and Mr. Tolles, and from this time I only know of his work from what I have learned from my rather intimate meetings with him and his associates. It is enough to say that retaining the same habits and tastes he had full opportunity of developing and perfecting himself in what may be called the art of presentation in their strong features of all material evidence for the prosecution or defense and of such forceful statements of the law applicable thereto as will, at least, prevent the lesser from seeming to be the better reason. It is known to many of you that some of these controversies in which Mr. Kline has been engaged up to the time of his death have involved amounts as large as any which have been contended for in our courts, a judgment of affirmance in one of them having been pronounced by the Circuit Court of Appeals of Cincinnati since the time of his death. Another of them, as I am informed, resulted in a settlement finally effected only a few days before his death, in the working out of which by negotiations carried on in New York, he encountered such fatigue as may have been the remote cause of his death.

As to the measure of success which attended his work, I think that the fact that up to the last it was such as enabled him to retain the clientage he had served so long and constantly, and, largely through the connection of such clientage, to be ever pressed into matters of larger magnitude and importance, would indicate that success went largely with what he undertook. Aside from this, to any one knowing his capacity, tastes and habits of life, assurance would be given from the very first that success in such branch or department of work as he might engage in was a matter dependent only on the continuance of life and health.

Having had early warning that his bodily frame would not endure unreasonable strain, he adopted a course of life that, for its regularity and abstemiousness, was, among his friends, ever a subject of remark. He could not bear to be idle. While ever an entertaining companion and enjoying to the full the society of his fellows, except when called from the city, he was rarely absent from his home after office hours. Living this sort of life and having tastes only for the work of his profession by day and for the gathering of information and entertainment from books by night, which only supplemented and aided him in his work by day, there was hardly an opportunity for failure to overtake him. His taste for literature and his acquaintance with the best of it is a matter known to all of his intimates. I doubt whether there is in any private house in the city a library from which the varied information which makes up the stock of the well informed and accomplished man can better be derived, and certainly no private library, large though it be, with all the books of which the owner was more familiar. It added much to his good fortune and happiness that though twice married, the wife whom he lost and the one who succeeded her were persons having like tastes for literature, whose habits were to join with him in the reading, or rather the study, of book after book as they came to be taken up.

Being by nature a man of strong convictions and outspoken habit, his life brought him at times into a position of political activity. Originally and normally a member of the Democratic party, he had no hesitancy in withdrawing from it his support when his convictions and the platform of the party were at variance. During the year 1885 he, with much reluctance, allowed his name to go before the Democratic Convention held at Dayton for Governor, but was defeated by Mr. Campbell, who, as the Democratic candidate, was elected to that office in the fall of that year.

Within a few years after the close of the Civil War, the government entered upon a plan for the resumption of payment, based upon the original gold standard, when it was found that the effect of contracting the currency to meet the expansion effected during the War was to make more difficult the payment of debts contracted during the expansion period. From this course arose great discontent, especially among the debtor class, which, beginning with expressions of opposition to the course of contraction adopted, finally took the form of declarations in favor of expansion by the issue of government paper or silver coinage based on a ratio of sixteen to one. As early as the year 1884 a so-called Greenback Convention was held at Indianapolis, at which Benjamin F. Butler was nominated for President on a platform favoring the immediate issue of government paper. Foreseeing the likelihood of such action and its effect, and the likelihood of the Democratic Convention favoring in some way such project, a campaign of education was initiated by the Republican Executive Committee. John Hay, not being at that time otherwise engaged, and desiring to reside for a time in Cleveland with the family of his wife, had charge of the movement in northern Ohio. They had no difficulty in enlisting Mr. Kline in the cause, and for some weeks he was almost constantly engaged in making speeches, both by day and by night, in school houses and town halls throughout the state. Whether this campaign of education was the efficient cause or not, it is certain that the movement favoring further expansion never had great following here. Twelve years, however, after this first Greenback Convention, so-called, Mr. Bryan was nominated on a free silver platform by the Democratic party. This was to Mr. Kline the abomination of desolation, and marked the parting of the ways. In connection with other Democrats throughout the country who could not subscribe to the platform, he was instrumental, as was also Judge Clarke, then residing in Youngstown, in the calling of the Democratic so-called Hard Money Convention at Indianapolis, at which Mr. Kline was one of the delegates and a member of its Committee on Resolutions, and, as I have understood, active in formulating such resolutions as were adopted.

To have accepted any office other than that possibly of judge would have broken in upon the course of life he had adopted, and to have accepted a judgeship, thus removing him from his business of advocacy, would not have been to his taste. He retained, however, at all times his active interest in governmental affairs, and it is known to many that through his acquaintance with prominent men, and men influential in the councils of both parties, he had much to do with securing the nomination or appointment to public offices of men whom he regarded as the best available for the positions.

Being a graduate of Williams College, he always retained an active interest in its continued success as one of the great institutions of the country. Whether or not he became one of its trustees I have not learned, but do know of his acting among or with them, especially in the matter of discouraging the course followed by so many institutions of granting the degree of Doctor of Law to all sorts and conditions of men. If any such degree was ever tendered him by this or any other institution, I am certain that it was immediately declined. When this institution sent out in 1916 its regular letter to graduates for information concerning themselves, they received from Mr. Kline the letter which I will now read, as presenting his own story in a very brief way, of what had come to him in the course of his life:

“October 27, 1916.

“Professor Charles Nobel, Grinnell, Iowa.

“DEAR CLASSMATE:—Yours of the 18th instant is at hand, making some inquiries with respect to my life, for class report.

“My story is simple and brief. After graduating, I came back to Ohio, my native state, entered a law office in the city of Cleveland, and there began the study of law. Running out of funds, I taught school a couple of years, and always thought I profited more by the two years I was trying to teach school and make myself understood and clear to pupils, than I ever got by any training in college. It was quite a different thing, as you no doubt have long since experienced, to prepare the lesson in Latin or Greek for recitation in college, to teaching the same studies to intelligent pupils. After two years of teaching, the experience of which has always been the most pleasing of my life, I again resumed the study of law, and was admitted to the Bar of Ohio in the fall of 1870; and since that date to this present writing I have been actively in the harness at home and elsewhere, in professional labor. Tenders of office have come to me, nominations to places upon the Bench, etc., but I think to my profit they have ultimately all been turned down. My ambitions in that direction, if I had any, have not been realized.

“I have always taken great pride in the fact that I have had as good opportunities as other young men who have the benefit of a college training. I think it is helpful to everybody and anybody, and under any fair conditions it would take a pretty smart boy to go through college without being benefited by the training.

“You ask me to say what seems to me most worth while as I look back over the fifty years. I can't tell. I have had some moderate professional success, have greatly enjoyed, without jealousy or envy, the competitive struggles of the Bar, have on public occasions and in political contests, at various places and under various conditions and circumstances, tried to give something back to the public for the training I had received in the public schools and elsewhere.

"It is the habit of graduates of Williams, who had the good fortune to sit under the instruction of Mark Hopkins, to speak of him and his influences as the choicest memory of their college days, and so that grand old man towers head and shoulders above them all; and though I have wandered many a weary foot since auld lang syne, and have met many of the distinguished men of the country, in public and private life, I still think that there comes from his memory the most of inspiration to me.

"These little egotistical notes of one's modest life are never very enjoyable in writing, and I avoid it as much as possible, but I am glad to conform to your request, and extend my hearty greetings over the lapse of fifty years since we parted at Williams.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed)

"VIRGIL P. KLINE."

Mr. Kline leaves behind him a widow, two married daughters and a son, who has before him the outlook of a successful life. For all of them he has been able to make such fair provision as will insure them against misfortune other than that principal misfortune to them resulting from his death, which, to them, is the more severe by reason of the perfect harmony and delightful feeling of companionship among them which characterized the domestic household. In this connection, I may also say that to his family and some few who enjoyed his confidence, and to those of his friends who were less fortunate than he, and to families of such, and to probably none others, it is known that his sympathy, foresight, care and generosity extended far beyond the roof of his own house.

Added to the qualities which I have mentioned, he had another, perhaps the highest. I know not the word by which it should be designated. In the argument of cases, when there were circumstances to excite sympathy, there would be in his face at times a tremor of the lip and a hardening of the muscles to hold back any appearance of emotion—a look which could not be assumed, and which could not be counterfeited, but which gave evidence of the strength of his feeling and conviction, and at times there was to be seen the same look when the argument went strongly to the security of rights of persons or property against unlawful violation or encroachment. It was the brief external evidence that back of the spoken word was human sympathy, honesty and high conviction, in substance, that he was a man.

In all his relations with friends and clients and the many business associates he has had from the day when he joined with

Mr. Slade in 1871 to the day of his sudden retirement from his late firm, the members of which are known to you all, such, I think, was the estimate of him held by all of them.

While he died at a time when he seemed to be in full vigor, he did not die young. Forty-seven years of uninterrupted work as a lawyer is a long allotment as the average of life goes, and as it is attested by the fact that of the large body of lawyers who were here when he came only four are now living.

Thus, esteemed and honored in his life, shall the suddenness of his laying it down, during a watch in the night, be called unfortunate! The Collect of the Church still calls for deliverance from sudden death, but to this must there not be a weak response? "It is an everlasting act of parliament that all men must die," but not that all men must endure the contemplation of death. To most men the delayed progress of fatal disease must entail much misery which the forthwith summons would eliminate from their lives. I cannot think that the manner of his departure from life was not one of its fortunate incidents.

And, in conclusion, as we leave him, let us remember that while he entered the gate of active life without heritage, when he came from it he was not poor. That by his own effort from an early life among the lowly he, in his later days, sat at the councils of men conducting great affairs. That without being called to political station, he has contributed in a substantial way in directing the course of government administration and securing the efficiency of its agents, and that while associated with men who are heaping up riches in such sums as makes it impossible for them to tell who shall gather them, he was content with that better measure of accumulation which would provide him with the necessities and embellishments for the plain life he had chosen and a reasonable provision for the continued support of those who had become dependent upon him, and that through it all he forgot not that he was human.

D. C. HENDERSON, of Lima:—Mr. Chairman, I move that this most excellently prepared memorial be included in the record of this meeting, and that a copy of it be sent to the family of Mr. Kline, and that a vote of thanks be extended to Mr. Henderson for the able memorial he has prepared.

Motion duly seconded and unanimously carried.

P. L. A. LEIGHLEY, of Cleveland:—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: Some of you heard the excellent and forcible address of the Acting-President, Mr. Keating, yesterday, and I wish to offer a resolution in support of a portion of that address. The resolution is as follows:

RESOLUTION

It has come to the notice of this Association that some lawyers, though not members of the Association, have charged registrants for services in connection with the military questionnaire.

While this Association is without jurisdiction to deal with such cases as have come to its attention it takes the earliest opportunity to record its condemnation of such practice.

Furthermore, be it

Resolved, that this Association requests the bar throughout the state to set its face strongly against such a practice and expose and condemn the same wherever discovered and recommends that the profession at large tender and give its services without compensation to those entering the military service when such professional services have reference to any subject matter connected with entering into the service or bearing in any way directly or indirectly upon the service.

I move the adoption of this resolution.

The motion was duly seconded by numerous members, and unanimously carried.

THE CHAIRMAN:—Next on the program is the report of the Special Committee on Uniform System of Reporting.

DANIEL W. IDDINGS, of Dayton, Chairman of the Committee on Uniform System of Reporting, presented the report as follows:

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON UNIFORM SYSTEM OF REPORTING.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 27, 1918.

At the last meeting of this Association at Cedar Point on July 11, 1917, your Committee presented a report covering in detail the glaring abuses in reporting existing in our own state and in the nation as well, and recommended certain possible remedies considered worthy of further attempt at realization. The report was unanimously adopted, and the Committee authorized and instructed "to appear before the Supreme Court and the Courts of Appeals in the matter of their recommendations, and to take such action as they deem necessary to secure proper legislation."—(1917) 38 O. S. Bar Association Report 36-42.

Your Committee is co-ordinated with a similar committee of the American Bar Association, known as its Committee on Reports and Digests by virtue of the special membership thereon of its Chairman as representing Ohio.

In our last report referred to we requested this Association to memorialize the American Bar Association and its Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to take appropriate action on the general subject and to call a meeting of all State Reporters in an effort to perfect them into a national organization, to be co-ordinated, and meet annually with the American Bar Association.

By adoption of our report this memorialization of the national association was authorized, and certified copies of our report went forward to the President of the American Bar Association and the President of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. Replies had indicated exceeding interest and willingness to co-operate, but the program for the Saratoga Springs Meeting last year had then been already made up, and action relating to calling the State Reporters into conference could not be had, the time being too short.

There came out of the Saratoga meeting, though, most important action, in that a resolution offered by the National Committee on Reports and Digests, unanimously prevailed, providing for the presentation of a Memorial to the United States Courts and the Appellate Courts of the several states, decrying the multiplicity of reports and calling upon the judiciary to assist the Bar in reducing the number of printed volumes of decisions.

Your Chairman was later specially commissioned to present this Memorial to the appropriate Courts of Ohio, and the plan was for our Committee to bring the Memorial before the Mid-Winter Session of this Association, believing that most of the judges and lawyers assembled in a body could thus be better impressed with its important message, than by seriatim presentation of the Memorial to the several Courts. The Mid-Winter Session was wisely abandoned on account of the huge task then resting on the Bar as members of Legal Advisory Boards in disposing of the Questionnaires under the Federal Selective Service Act.

This Memorial was founded upon, indeed is a virtual condensation of an impelling paper read before the Judicial Section of the American Bar Association at Chicago in August, 1916, by Hon. John W. Davis, Solicitor-General of the United States, entitled "The Case for the Case Lawyer."

At the outset of this paper, and as its keynote, we comfortingly find General Davis quoting our own Judge Wanamaker of the Supreme Court in the case of State vs. Rose, 89 O. S. 383, 388-389, 106 N. E. 50, 52, as follows:

"Case law is fast becoming the great bane of the Bench and Bar. Our old-time great thinkers and profound reasoners who conspicuously honored and distinguished our jurisprudence have been succeeded very largely by an industrious, painstaking, far-searching army of sleuths of the type of Sherlock Holmes, hunting some precedent in some case, confidently assured that if the search be long enough and far enough some apparently parallel case may be found to justify even the most absurd and ridiculous contention. Case after case is piled, Ossa on Pelion, and about an equal number can be found on each side; then the court is expected to strike the balance and decide according to the preponderance of cases rather than the preponderance of reason and justice."
—(1916) 41 American Bar Association Report 757-769.

The first opportunity to present this Memorial to the Bench and Bar of Ohio en masse now occurring at its regular annual meeting we shall take the liberty of now reading it in full, as it is short, as part of this Report. The Committee also has in mind the further presentation of the Memorial to the several courts in formal manner during the next few months so that no judge can hope to escape at least the "listening process."

The Memorial is as follows:

MEMORIAL

Presented by The American Bar Association to the United States Courts and the Appellate Courts of the Several States:

"The American Bar Association, as representative of all branches of the legal profession in America, and with conscious pride in the manner in which American courts have discharged and are discharging their judicial duties, ventures, in a spirit not of criticism, but of co-operation, to address to the courts of the country whose opinions are reported in the books the following memorial:

"For many years the accumulation of the reported cases which form our body of legal precedent has been the subject of grave concern. The acceleration in their numbers in recent years is such as to create alarm. More than 11,500 volumes of American reports are now extant, and those published within the last thirty years exceed in number the total for all the years preceding. In our system of state and federal governments we have far more courts of last resort than any other people have, and with the growth of population, litigation in all these courts must increase, in like proportion. Unless, therefore, the problem is seriously attacked it is not improbable that in the near future the burden of accumulated precedent will become not only serious, but insupportable. Indeed, it may ultimately jeopardize our whole theory of customary, as distinguished from codified, law, and may impair, if not destroy, our doctrine of the sanctity of judicial precedent.

"The American Bar Association recognizes the joint interest of the Bench and Bar in the premises, and does not minimize the share of the Bar in the responsibility for the evil nor its duty to co-operate in applying the remedy. It believes, however, that the matter is one for the especial cognizance of the judiciary and that no effort at reform, whether it come from the profession itself or from the legislative branch of the government, can be so effective as those remedies which judicial initiative alone can supply.

"With a deep sense of the gravity of the situation the Association is impelled, therefore, to approach the courts of the country and to urge that they seriously address themselves to the problem presented. In so doing criticism is foreign to its intent and censorship beyond its power. Certain concrete steps may be referred to because they have been so often discussed that they may be treated as representing the common judgment of the profession. These are: (a) A conscious effort at the shortening of opinions and the recognition of brevity as a cardinal virtue second only to clearness; (b) an avoidance of multiplied citations and of elaborate discussions of well-settled legal principles and of lengthy extracts from text-books and earlier opinions; (c) the presentation of so much, and no more, of the facts as are necessary to present the precise question at issue; (d) a reduction of the number of reasoned opinions and a corresponding increase in the number of memorandum or per curiam decisions, with a brief statement, when necessary, of the points decided and of the ruling authorities.

"To such efforts as may be made in pursuit of this and similar reforms, the Association, speaking for itself and its membership, pledges to the judiciary its hearty support."

(Presented in pursuance of a resolution adopted at the meeting held in September, 1917.)

Advance publication of the Report of the Committee on Reports and Digests of the American Bar Association to be delivered to the Association at its annual meeting in this same city convening tomorrow discloses that we did well in certifying our last year's report to the national organization. Our recommendations for reducing the number of bound volumes are included and referred to therein as "definite recommendations for the reformation of the present system of reporting," and our plan to collect the State Reporters into a co-ordinated national body is emphasized.—(1918) 4 American Bar Association Journal, (Part 3, July '18), 514, 515.

A general discussion of the subject at this approaching meeting is called for by the Committee, and no doubt will take place. Accordingly, any action this Association takes today on this Report will undoubtedly be recognized as important by the national association about to meet on Ohio soil. Ohio today has the opportunity, and will surely make avail of it, to be the leader in this fight for reform in law reporting. Waste of paper and printers' ink has been eliminated as a war measure in the general newspapers of the country, to whom the constitutional guaranty of "freedom of the press" applies. Are the lawyers and judges of this State and Nation powerless to deal with, or have dealt with, thus similarly and summarily, the private publication ad infinitum of the decisions of the courts, when such publishers are mere attaches of the courts, with no rights save those of sufferance?

On September 18, 1917, at the city of Columbus your Committee met with the Judges of the Appellate Courts of Ohio, the occasion being their annual meeting. Following the recommendations of our report an amendment of amended Rule XII was proposed with real teeth in it, new or revised matter being italicized and self-explanatory, as follows:

RULE XII.

REPORTS OF CASES.

"The decisions in all cases in the Courts of Appeals shall be reported, together with the reasons therefor, and memoranda thereof shall be filed with the clerks of the respective Courts. No case shall be reported for publication except such as may be selected by the several Courts of Appeals, or by a majority of the Judges thereof. Whenever it has been thus decided to report a case for publication the syllabus thereof shall be prepared by the Judge delivering the opinion, and approved by a majority of the members of the court; and the report may be per curiam, or if an opinion be reported, the same shall be written in as brief and concise form as may be consistent with a clear presentation of the law of the case. Opinions for permanent publication in book form shall be furnished to the official reporter of the Court of Appeals and to no other person. Any attorney at law, Clerk of Court or employe thereof, court stenographer, or any party litigant who shall furnish any opinion of this Court to any person or persons for publication, other than as hereinbefore provided, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of Court, and shall be punished accordingly. Only such cases as are hereafter reported in accordance with this rule shall be recognized by and receive the official sanction of the Court of Appeals."

Hon. E. O. Randall, our efficient State Reporter, attended and was helpful in presenting the tentative rule to the Judges, including answering their several questions. Doubt was expressed by several of the Judges as to practicability of enforcing such a Rule in the absence of specific legislation, and finally the Rule was referred to a committee of eight judges, one from each circuit, with the request that they co-operate with our Committee in an effort to solve the difficulty. A meeting with this Committee and our Committee was planned for the Mid-winter Session, but not held when same was canceled. Your Committee will accordingly arrange a meeting with the Judges' Committee in advance of their annual meeting next month, and another effort will be made to come to some solution, without appealing to the approaching session of the legislature next January, where we will go if we have to, and we believe with the backing of the Attorney-General. Attorney-General McGhee expressed himself last winter in anticipation of a special session of the legislature as willing to ask the Governor to incorporate the subject in his call.

The two unofficial publishers of Appellate Court reports have continued through the year to boldly compete with the State Reporter in his bound publication of the official reports of the Courts of Appeal. Charged with misnomer in holding to the names "Circuit Court Reports, New Series" and "Circuit Decisions," the publication first named has added to the confusion by changing its name to "Ohio Courts of Appeals," abbreviated "O. C. A.," though continuing its old numbering.—15 O. L. R. (part 48 issue of Feb. 25, '18) 569.

The official bound volumes are called "Ohio Appellate Court Reports," abbreviated "O. A. C." It can't be beat, this Ohio reporting mess, and still it goes on merrily. It is submitted that the copyright of the official reports is infringed by this new name assumed by such publisher. The Committee offers its services free to the State Reporter and the State in making a test case of this fresh infraction upon their legal rights. The Federal Courts have held that "I-want-a" is an infringement of the trade name "U-need-a" in the cracker industry. The significance of this citation is meant for more than humor.—(1899) National Biscuit Co. vs. Baker, 95 Fed. 135.

The law library associations of the State are also rightly aroused over this subject, as a copy of a letter of The Akron Law Library Association appended hereto as an exhibit, but which will not be read, discloses. Your Committee proposes a general conference of these associations in joint meeting, and hopes to arrange same for next month, in advance of the meeting with the Appellate Judges before mentioned.

Last year your Committee on Judicial Administration and Legal Reform recommended as its third proposition that our Supreme Court be requested to supplement all citations of decisions with parallel citations to the National Reporter System, a complete system of private unofficial reports. Chairman Follett of that Committee by agreement moved, and it was carried, that this recommendation be referred to our Committee for report back at this meeting.—(1917) 38 O. S. Bar Association Report, 58, 60.

Your Committee is mindful of the fact that over 70 of the county law libraries of the State have little or no access to any official reports but those of our own State and rely exclusively upon the unofficial Reporter System, and is also mindful that 30 or more official state reports of the other states already incorporate parallel citations to the Reporter System, yet in view of the Memorial from the American Bar Association just presented to you as part of this Report, and the reforms therein demanded, this Committee cannot yield to recommending to this Association that it request our Supreme Court Judges to take such action as your Committee on Judicial Administration and Legal Reform last year suggested. Such action would be out of line with the new meaning of "legal reform" as developed by the national meeting at Saratoga that followed our meeting last year, as emphasized by its Memorial just read, then adopted. One of the concrete steps stated therein as tending toward the reform sought by reducing the number of volumes of reports is "an avoidance of multiplied citations." We cannot hope to reduce the number of volumes if we are unwilling that the length as well as number of decisions be not reduced.

This brings to conclusion the review of what your Committee has done, and plans to do, with your approval and continuance as a Committee.

The forthcoming meeting with the Appellate Judges may see our problem solved. If not, the legislature next winter will be besought to furnish a statutory remedy.

In Ohio it is the will of the Bar and this Association that there shall be one set and one set only of bound Appellate Court Reports and that is the official set, edited and published by the State Reporter under the direct supervision of the Judges themselves. As to the bound volumes of the Nisi Prius Reports, they still may well remain private enterprises, as likewise the weekly legal periodicals, which carry quite properly the advance reports of the decisions of the several courts. In these war times, as previously hinted at, we would finally suggest to these publishers, of whom there are two, that paper and ink might be denied one or both of them by the Federal War Industries Board if they still persist in deliberate waste by duplicate and triplicate publication of the bound volumes of the Ohio Appellate Court decisions.

We request that the American Bar Association be furnished with a copy of this Report together with a minute of such action as may be taken hereon for consideration with the Report of its own Committee on Reports and Digests at its meeting about to convene.

Mr. Albert D. Alcorn, the only member of this Committee not joining in this Report, is absent in France as a Major in the United States Army.

Respectfully submitted,

EXHIBIT.

November 21, 1917.

The Dayton Law Library Association, Dayton, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—We are sending out this letter to the various law library associations of the state with the view of securing united action among the law libraries to prevent duplication of intermediate court reports. We have two weekly publications and several series of Common Pleas and Court of Appeals reports. These are practically duplications.

Inasmuch as the law libraries are the center of the law book industry of the state, it seems to us appropriate that some action should be taken to eliminate these duplications.

We are, therefore, taking the initiative in writing to you in order to get your views with the idea of ultimately holding a conference.

We appreciate the fact that the individual lawyer or law firm is pretty nearly helpless and the only recourse is to buy all the reports. At this time of conservation in all lines, it would seem that now, of all times, it is proper to take this action.

Incidentally, we feel that we should be able to secure promptly the issue of the reports of the various courts. For example, there seems to be no reason why the opinions of the Supreme Court for the year 1916 should remain unpublished in the regular reports at this time, practically the close of 1917.

It occurs to us further, that there should be uniformity in the digests of the reports. There are now three, and possibly four, separate digests of the various state reports.

Will you kindly advise us your views on this matter and indicate to us whether you think a conference would be advisable?

Yours very truly,

THE AKRON LAW LIBRARY ASSOCIATION,

Per CHAS. H. STAHL, President,
MRS. J. A. HOOVER, Secretary.

THE CHAIRMAN:—Gentlemen, you have heard the report. What is your pleasure?

WARREN W. HOLE, of Cleveland:—I move that the report be received and adopted, and that a copy be furnished to the American Bar Association as suggested in the report itself, and that the committee be continued.

Motion duly seconded and unanimously carried.

THE CHAIRMAN:—We now come to unfinished business. There was a special committee appointed by the Acting-President on the suggestion and recommendation of the Secretary. Is that committee ready to report?

ARTHUR I. VORYS, of Columbus:—I have the report, Mr. Chairman, which reads as follows:

To The Ohio State Bar Association:

Your Committee to whom was referred the suggestion of our Secretary, submit the following report:

We concur in the idea submitted by the Secretary that some means should be adopted by this Association to secure greater interest and a more complete organization of the lawyers of Ohio, that we may not only secure needed reforms in legislation, but may more effectually and efficiently aid our nation in winning victory and in conserving and preserving the fruits thereof. To this end we favor the appointment of an official representative to aid the executive officers in organizing the counties not having local organizations and to secure an increased membership in our State Association. We believe such official should be appointed either by the President or by that officer and the Executive Committee, and that within a certain limit he should be compensated. Funds available for such a purpose are not now sufficient. We make the following recommendations:

First. That the annual dues of this Association be increased to and fixed at three dollars per year.

Second. That the President with the advice and consent of the Executive Committee, be authorized to appoint a deputy whose duty it shall be to secure better organization of the lawyers of Ohio and increase the interest in the membership of the State Association, and the President may agree to pay such deputy for services and expenses actually rendered and incurred, not exceeding the sum of twelve hundred dollars in any one year.

Respectfully submitted,

E. B. KING,
ALLEN ANDREWS,
A. I. VORYS,
Committee.

MR. VORYS:—To bring it before the Association, Mr. President, I move that the report be adopted, including the recommendations of the Committee.

The motion was duly seconded.

A spirited discussion on the motion ensued in which many members took part.

D. C. HENDERSON, of Lima:—I move that the report of the Committee be laid on the table, to be called up at such time as may be desired.

Motion duly seconded.

After a short discussion the motion to lay on the table was withdrawn by Mr. Henderson with the consent of the member who seconded the motion.

THE CHAIRMAN:—We are still debating the original motion to adopt the report.

SIDNEY G. STRICKER, of Cincinnati:—I move that the report be referred back to the Executive Committee, with the request that it formulate some definite plan of action for increasing the membership and providing sufficient funds to keep the membership alive.

This motion received no second.

The original motion was discussed for a considerable length of time by various members.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The Chair does not desire to prevent anyone who wishes to do so to speak upon this motion, but the Chair realizes that we have some further business to do, and the afternoon is almost gone.

The question was called for by various members.

The Chairman put the original question to adopt the report of the Special Committee, and the motion was declared carried, by the Chairman.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I want to be registered "No."

SIDNEY G. STRICKER, of Cincinnati:—I am "No," too.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—If the Chair will pardon me, the motion was to refer and not to adopt. Mr. Stricker made a motion and it was seconded, that the report be referred back to the Executive Committee, and we have had no opportunity for the discussion of that motion.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The Chair did not understand that the motion to refer had a second. Unless someone makes a motion to reconsider, the vote will stand as we have taken it on the original motion to adopt the report.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—Well, I desire to appeal from the decision of the Chair. I do it only with a desire to be fair.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The question now is, shall the Chair be sustained in ruling that the vote taken was on the original motion to adopt the report of the Special Committee. Those in favor of sustaining the Chair will say "Aye." (Numerous "Ayes.") Those to the contrary, "No." (A few "Noes.")

The Chair was declared sustained.

HENRY BAER, of Cincinnati:—I move to amend Article XX of the Constitution of The Ohio State Bar Association to read as follows when amended: "The admission fee will, in all cases, be $3.00, which shall include the dues of the applicant to December 31st of the year in which he is admitted. The annual dues of the members shall be $3.00, to be paid yearly, on or before the first day of the annual meeting of the Association, etc." The continuation of the Article to remain as it now stands.

The motion was duly seconded.

THE CHAIRMAN:—Any remarks on this motion?

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I move that the dues be increased to $5.00, Mr. Chairman.

JOSEPH L. STERN, of Cleveland:—I move to amend the amendment proposed by Mr. Baer, by striking out the words and figures "$3.00" and inserting the words and figures "$5.00," thereby increasing the annual dues to $5.00.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The amendment to Mr. Baer's motion is carried. We come now to the original motion of Mr. Baer.

The original motion was put by the Chairman and declared carried.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—Mr. Chairman, I move a reconsideration of the motion.

The motion was duly seconded.

A vote was taken and the Chair declared the motion lost.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The next business in order is the nomination and election of officers. The first officer to be nominated is that of President.

D. C. HENDERSON, of Lima:—I nominate for the office of President during the coming year, Mr. E. N. Brown, of Youngstown.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I take great pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Brown.

C. C. MIDDLESWART, of Marietta:—I move that the nominations be closed and that the Secretary be instructed to cast the unanimous ballot of the Association for Mr. Brown.

Motion duly seconded and unanimously carried.

THE SECRETARY:—The Secretary casts the unanimous ballot of the Association in favor of Mr. Ensign N. Brown for President of the Association for the ensuing year.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The next thing in order is to select a Secretary.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I nominate C. E. Blanchard, and move that the nominations be closed and that he be the unanimous choice of this Convention, and the President be directed to cast the vote of this Convention in his favor.

Motion duly seconded and carried.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The Chair casts the unanimous ballot of the Association in favor of Mr. Blanchard.

THE CHAIRMAN:—Whom will we have to serve us as Treasurer for the coming year to collect this $5.00?

CHARLES BUSS, of Cleveland:—I nominate Mr. John F. Carlisle, of Columbus.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I second the motion.

DANIEL W. IDDIGS, of Dayton:—I move that the nominations be closed and that the Secretary be directed to cast the unanimous ballot of this body for Mr. Carlisle.

Motion seconded and unanimously carried.

THE SECRETARY:—The Secretary casts the unanimous ballot in favor of Mr. John F. Carlisle for Treasurer for the ensuing year.

THE CHAIRMAN:—The next thing in order will be the announcement of the Vice-Presidents and the members of the Standing Committees that have been selected and elected by the various judicial districts.

The Secretary then read the list of Vice-Presidents and the members of the Standing Committees that had been selected by the various judicial districts.

Upon motion, duly made and seconded, these Vice-Presidents and members of the Standing Committees were approved.

SIMEON M. JOHNSON, of Cincinnati:—I want this record to show the usual courtesies to the presiding officers. I move you, gentlemen, that a vote of thanks be tendered to the Acting-President, Mr. Keating, for the able manner in which he presided, and to the Chairman, Mr. Andrews, for the courteous and pleasing manner in which he presided. All those in favor of this motion will say "Aye."

The motion was unanimously carried.

There being no further business to come before the body, the Chairman declared the Thirty-Ninth Annual Meeting of The Ohio State Bar Association adjourned sine die.
